Dear Reader,

As societies around the world rapidly change, diversify, and fragment at this critical juncture in our new century, the importance of independently accumulated data on socio-political cohesion and extremism is essential for national security, an informed populace, and the historical record. At a time of intense division, anecdote, and rancor, objectively collected academic data and facts are key. We neither take, nor solicit funds for this report.

The Center for the Study of Hate and Extremism at California State University, San Bernardino (CSHE) is a two-decade old non-partisan independent research and policy institution focusing on the latest and most detailed trend analysis for hate crime and extremism across both borders and the ideological spectrum. Our foundational principles relate to the preservation of the institutions and processes of our pluralistic democracy. These include protection for: religious exercise and abstinence from it, association, speech, political participation, peaceful civil order, and a free press and academic inquiry. As inquiry is key, we routinely curate our own national crime data, independently, to assess trends and compare to the findings of others.

We are pleased to present, in a one-of-a-kind compendium, the latest international police and social science trend data, as well as legal policy analysis. Also included and summarized below are CSHE's own new 2018-2019 exclusive findings on the latest police reported hate crime in major cities across the U.S., and our enumeration of American extremist homicides. The expanded U.S. city analysis is presented after the various executive summaries.

Among the observations and findings presented:

Cities Up

Hate crimes rose 9 percent in major U.S. cities in 2018, for a fifth consecutive increase, to decade highs, as cities with increases outnumbered those with declines two to one. In contrast, crime overall in major cities has declined in both of the last two years.

Preliminary partial year 2019 data also show increases in a majority of cities surveyed, but those early double-digit percentage increases, barring unforeseen catalysts, will likely erode by year-end, as first-half 2018 comparisons were down before reversing. Hate crimes often spike around catalytic domestic and international events as well as political conflicts. The year prior to presidential election years are mostly up for hate crime.

The most common victims for hate crime reported to police in major cities in 2018 were African Americans, Jews, and Gays, but Whites and Jews experienced the biggest percentage increases, as anti-Semitic hate crimes and assaults also rose internationally. Jews were the direct target of half of the bias/extremist homicides in 2018, in the worst year ever for anti-Semitic killings in the United States.

Some Declines and Reshuffling off Recent Highs

Not all data sets were up after hitting recent peaks, however, as Canada, California, and the ADL's anti-Semitic audit declined, just off of recent 2017 highs. Anti-Muslim hate crimes, which had spiked around terror attacks and international tensions, declined in 2018 in both CAIR's annual data and CSHE's city survey. Still, in 2017, the FBI enumerated a greater number of anti-Muslim assaults than after 9/11. Immigration has overtaken terrorism as a top political issue.

In 2018, extremist homicides also decreased markedly, to only 22, in the United States, on a decline in Violent Salafist Jihadist motivated killings to only one. White nationalist/far right motivated homicides were the most frequent, rising to 17 in 2018, from 13 a year prior. While, there were both a string of politically motivated assaults and suspected crimes—and non-violent protests—by Antifa, anarchists, and hard left extremists, there have been no homicides by any of their adherents in 2018 or 2019.

Political Season Enhances and Somewhat Diversifies Hate & Extremism Risks

However, increasingly conflictual and racially divisive domestic politics, widening international tensions, weapon availability, and renewed online extremist recruitment activity (including by reconstituted foreign terror groups) diversifies the risk going forward. A broad range of ideologies still exist, capable of inspiring mass violence, infrastructure attacks, targeted assassinations, or plots from geographically disparate and often autonomous loners and small cells, who often operate in their home regions, sometimes combining a mix of idiosyncratic motivations. Hate crimes overall have spiked over the last decade around political events and rhetoric. The expansion of white nationalism has created a coalesced movement and a violent extremist fringe.

White nationalism/far right extremism continue to be most ascendant, despite the incapacity of many of their most prominent groups and leaders. The overwhelming majority of declining extremist domestic homicides in 2018 were by white nationalist/far right sole assailants who attacked around the mid-term elections. Thus, the risk of extremist violence by them will likely continue into this current nascent political season, around catalytic events in campaigns, international conflicts, terrorism, and heated rhetoric. While white supremacists and ultra-nationalists will maintain their position at the top of the threat matrix, the risk is also diversifying well beyond the far right, to include those with antagonistic ideologies, those inspired by zealots and conflicts abroad, and those with more personal grievances in an increasingly coarse and fragmented socio-political landscape.

More States Adopt and Expand Hate Crime Laws

Forty-seven states, D.C., Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands now have hate crime laws of varying effectiveness, but the number covering gays, gender, or gender identity is still below three dozen. Legislation and policies to expand victim categories and protections, close loopholes, and enhance police training and data collection are among the most common recent reforms.

While the Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of carefully drafted penalty enhancement laws for hate crime, it has also affirmed constitutional protections for crude political rhetoric, hate speech, and criminal defendants. In recent years, a few federal and state courts have restricted or invalidated laws used to punish extremists or hate crime offenders.

An Overall Multi-Year Rise

Nationally, hate crimes have been rising across most groups in recent years after bottoming in 2014, with CSHE/WVU analysis of FBI and police data showing the biggest spikes in politically conflictual periods in October 2008, November 2016, August 2017, and fall 2018. African Americans have consistently been the top target for hate crime, but in shrinking proportions. Recent social surveys mirror these findings, showing an increase in social distancing and fear, as well as less tolerance for certain other outgroups.

For the first time, a slight majority of hate crime victims now report to police, but the majority of reported cases are still not cleared by arrests. Of those that are cleared by arrests, most are prosecuted by local authorities who do not charge them as hate crimes, largely owing to issues relating to evidence and the high burden of proof for specific intent crimes.

Confirmed official false police and campus reports of either fraudulent bias motivated criminal acts, or those deceptively reported to authorities in the U.S., numbered 11 in 2018 and constitute less than one percent of all hate crime estimated to be reported to police. They were often committed by young people or college students. There is simply no public list showing more than around one percent or less of police reported hate crimes as frauds.

In 2017, FBI reported hate crime rose 17 percent to 7,175, the highest total since 2008, along with a 5.8 percent increase in participating agencies and a 15 percent rise in those reporting incidents. When adjusted for population differences in the FBI annual samples, the 2017 rise dips to 10.9 percent. The 2017 levels were 31 percent above 2014's multi-decade low of 5,479 and 26 percent below 2001's record of 9,730.

Enhancement in data efficiencies, agency participation, and victim reporting partially contributed to increases, most prominently in a minority of lower per capita reporting jurisdictions and a few mid-sized states. Still, over a quarter of the nation's largest cities reported no hate crime in 2017, including some that have appeared to have misclassified cases. About half of the nation's reported hate crimes come from about a half dozen states.

An Online Shift

Even as large commercial platforms grapple with bigoted content, hatemongers have increasingly migrated to splintered free speech, encrypted and affinity-based platforms, and messaging services, where hate speech is more prolific. Like hate crimes, activity on those platforms spikes around catalytic events. Anti-Semitic and anti-Black virtual hate speech had the most sustained digital increase, even as white supremacist and neo-Nazi presence at large rallies plummeted, amidst a post-Charlottesville breakdown of more organized extremist groups and their leaders, and the closing of an election cycle.

The Internet has enabled not only newly hobbled extremist groups to maintain a public presence, it also provides organizationally unaffiliated extremists and loners with a tool to congregate, radicalize, and broadcast not only bigotry, but disturbingly, lone acts of mass violence that reference prior attacks. Social media has also been weaponized, not only by domestic and foreign extremists, but also by state actors like Russia seeking to "sow discord" and launch conspiracy theories amongst the electorate to advance prejudice and political division.

Factors impacting extremism or intergroup relations, outlined herein, include increased or sustained:

- political and ethnic polarization;
- hate crime levels;
- racial and ethnic nationalism amidst sharp divisions over immigration;
- splintering of social media;
- realignment, operational impairment, and leadership changes among organized extremist groups as they fragment;
- anti-Semitic violence;
- distrust in institutions;
- anti-immigrant, anti-Muslim, and anti-LGBTQ sentiment;
- demographic shifts;
- rise in displaced persons and refugees; and
- foreign manipulation.

The overall data show polarization and fragmentation amidst sustained multi-year increases in hate crime and bigoted digital speech. In particular, both overt and shrouded xenophobia and anti-Semitism are key socio-political levers internationally, as societies become less unified, open, trusting in communal institutions, flexible on immigration, and tolerant. The most pronounced spikes occurred around domestic catalysts and international conflicts, but increasingly over the last decade, the worst months for both bias crime and fatal extremist violence were clustered around highly charged political events and conflicts relating to terrorism and immigration. Thus, in a new highly anticipated, fluid, yet freewheeling election cycle, divisive politics are likely to influence social cohesion and violent extremism. This is not just likely with respect to more coalesced far right and nationalist groups, but to a lesser extent, across the ideological spectrum. Moreover, identified foreign and domestic malefactors still seek leverage by manipulating the widening fissures that divide us.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY I: LATEST 2018 MAJOR U.S. CITY DATA

CSHE Exclusive: Hate Crimes Rise 9% in 2018 to Decade High of 2,009 in 30 U.S. Cities, 2019 Also Up

► Hate crimes in thirty of America's largest cities rose nine percent in 2018 to a decade high of 2,009, according to police data analyzed by the Center for the Study of Hate & Extremism at California State University, San Bernardino (CSHE). Last year marked the fifth consecutive increase in hate crimes, and the steepest rise since 2015. Seventy percent, or 21 police departments, reported increases, with just under half (47 percent), or 14 agencies, hitting or tying decade highs. 2018 was the only year this decade the cities exceeded 2,000. Partial year 2019 data from 18 cities also shows an overall rise.

► If forthcoming Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) 2018 hate crime totals replicate this nine percent rise, it will be the fourth consecutive increase and the highest total since the FBI's 2001's record. While CSHE abstains from making such a specific forecast, 2018 will likely show another national increase. CSHE's last multi-city study deviated about one percent from subsequent FBI findings and matched overall FBI national trends for four of the last five years, 2013 to 2017.¹

Hate Crimes in 30 Major U.S. Cities: 2010-2018, 38 Million Total Population, 11.5% of U.S. Population

Data is from official statistics on hate crimes reported to and categorized as such by police departments obtained from both Freedom of Information Act requests and publicly available police or state crime reporting agencies. Because several departments cover more categories than the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) Hate Crimes data, and cases update subsequent to initial reports, data may vary slightly from other reports.

► In contrast to a 3.5 percent decline in crime overall in major U.S. Cities in 2018 (source), these latest hate crime data mirror a multi-year rise across myriad other representative crime, social science, and digital datasets on prejudice and fragmented intergroup cohesion, also presented here. While this incremental rise occurred globally across many surveys, there is variation regarding targeting, timeframes, and localities. Distinct spikes occurred across data sets around conflictual, violent or political catalytic events, and during times of increased Russian social media manipulation.

The 2018 total marked a 42 percent increase over 2010's total of 1,417 and a 51 percent increase over 2013's decade low of 1,324. Moreover, full year increases reversed steep first half declines. In several cities with large percentage increases derived from very low numbers of reports, much of the rise is likely from improved efficiencies known as "reporting effect."

Not all data sets were up as hate crime in the ten largest American cities fell under one percent in 2018, after four increases, to 1,030, on a large anomalous drop in Phoenix. Still, totals exceeded one thousand for only the second time this decade, with seven of the cities rising, and half hitting decade highs: Los Angeles, Chicago, Houston, Dallas, and Philadelphia. The 2018 total is 32 percent above 2010's total, and fifty percent above 2013's decade low of 684.

Other 2018 reports with moderate relative declines off recent highs include Canada, California, and the Anti-Defamation League's (ADL) anti-Semitism audit. Canada's drop was off an all-time high, while the ADL saw a rise in violent incidents.

¹ CSHE's 2018 Report to the Nation found a 12 percent increase in hate crimes in an expanded 38 city data set for 2017, while the FBI's increase, when adjusted for population covered, was 10.9 percent.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY II: BIAS BY CITY IN 2018

2018 CSHE Exclusive: Bias Motivation for Hate Crimes Vary by City, but Anti-Black Most Common

► Race-based or anti-African American hate crimes were again the top bias categories in most cities, followed closely by anti-Gay and anti-Jewish hate crimes. Anti-White and anti-Jewish hate crimes rose the most in a smaller representative ten city sample. In addition to other factors, local demographics, not surprisingly, seem to play a role as cities with higher concentrations of certain groups often have a higher percentage of victims from them.

In 2018, as hate crimes increased by nine percent in our city sample, the Brennan Center found, in a similar data set of 30 large U.S. cities, that crime overall dropped 3.5 percent. In 2017, CSHE's thirty city hate crime survey was up six percent, while the Brennan Center found crime overall in cities dropped 2.1 percent, as violent crime fell by one percent to near multi-decade lows (source).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY III: CSHE Exclusive – 2019/2018 Latest Major U.S. City Trends: By City & Bias Motive

► The overall total for the ten largest U.S. cities was essentially flat for 2018, caused by an unexplained halving of hate crimes in Phoenix – the nation’s fifth largest city. Without Phoenix’s anomalous decline, the overall 2018 total for the nine remaining cities would be up 14 percent. The four largest American cities all had increases last year, and five cities, distinguished by green asterisks ()* and yellow highlight, hit or tied decade highs in 2018.

► Hate crime went up in seven top ten cities in 2018, while two cities declined. In 2017, those ten cities rose 12.5 percent and seven of them reported significant increases of over 10 percent, with five registering multi-year highs, while three cities declined. Two of those 2017 declines, New York and Chicago, were off of multi-year highs registered in the previous year of 2016.

The 25.9 million residents in the nation's ten largest cities constitute about nine percent of the country's residents, but those cities accounted for about 14.5 percent of the nation's reported hate crimes in 2017, the latest year for which the FBI has data. That year, hate crimes rose 12.7 percent in America's ten largest cities, six percent in all thirty cities CSHE surveyed, and 17 percent in FBI data.

*FBI Hate Crime Data obtained from National Archive of Criminal Justice Data

► In our latest 2018 multi-city study, race and ethnicity-based hate crimes, led by anti-Black hate crimes, again accounted for the greatest share, but anti-White crimes, of which there are far fewer, had the highest percentage increase, followed by Anti-Jewish.

► Religion overall, led by rising anti-Semitic cases (but declining anti-Muslim), and anti-Gay crimes, also saw increases and were again among the three most frequent bias motivations. Anti-African American hate crime rose in the three largest cities and would have risen overall, but decreased (as did the total) in a ten city sub-sample due to an unusual decline in Phoenix.

Because not all of the thirty cities surveyed broke down their data, and there was divergence among those that did, CSHE compiled various data sets. In 18 cities, we arranged the 2018 bias motive data individually by city, and of those there were fourteen with more specific breakdowns. Among those cities with only the more broad categorical breakdowns, race-based hate crimes were the most common at 41 percent, with sexual orientation at 26 percent, followed closely by religion at 24 percent, and the remaining eight percent split between gender, transgender, disability, and other.

In those cities with more specific breakdowns, African Americans were the most frequent target at 23.5 percent, Jews at 21.5 percent, LGBTQ at 13 percent (with the separate subset Anti-Gay Male an additional 8 percent), Whites at 9.3 percent, Latinos at 9.1 percent, Muslims at 4.8 percent, with Multi-Racial and Asian Pacific Islander at 2 percent each. Anti-disability and anti-gender hate crimes, which BJS and FBI data show are the least reported bias categories relative to victimizations, registered just below one percent, as did all other religions in our multi-city survey.

The FBI national data for 2017 was similar, but not identical, to our multi-city 2018 data set with Jewish, Gay, Muslim, and Latino victimizations proportionally less and African American more. FBI 2017 data show hate crime against African Americans at 28 percent, the LGBTQ community at 17.4 percent, Jews at 13.1 percent, Whites at 10 percent, and Latinos at 6 percent. These groups have higher population proportions in the larger cities reflected in our data set.

► Preliminary year-to-date 2019 hate crime data from 18 Major U.S. municipalities show 11 cities up \(61 percent\) and 7 cities down \(39 percent\), with a large increase overall that will likely diminish in the second half of the year.

△ Last year at this time most major cities were down, only to reverse in the second half, so these comparisons will likely narrow significantly by year-end. Since 1995, hate crimes have gone up in every year prior to a presidential election year, except for 2007 and 2011.

FBI / BJS: Crime Overall Declines As Hate Crimes Rise

► From 2010 to 2017, overall violent crime fell by 0.3 percent, but FBI-reported hate crime in the U.S. rose 8.3 percent. Overall violent crime fell 0.9 percent and property crime by 3.6 percent in 2017, as hate crime rose 17 percent.

Source: Pew Research Center

► When 2017 FBI hate crime data is scaled per capita to equalize for changes in population covered (306 million / 2017 and 289 million / 2016) the increase drops down to 10.9 percent—similar to the 12 percent rise in CSHE’s 2017 city study.

In 2016, there were 3.45 reports per agency submitting reports versus a similar 3.51 in 2017. However, in 2017, over 200 more agencies submitted reports, as more agencies appeared to pay renewed attention to the issue.

2017 was the FBI’s third consecutive annual increase and the highest total since 2008, when hate crime rose to a post-2001 high of 7,782, before reversing course into a sawtooth half-decade decline that ended in 2014 at 5,479.

In 2017, FBI data for all 7,175 hate crimes, including both “single and multiple bias” incidents, indicate race and ethnicity had a 57.6 percent share of hate crimes, religion had 21.8 percent, sexual orientation had 15.7 percent, gender identity (transgender) had 1.7 percent, and disability had 1.6 percent. Anti-religion hate crime has exceeded twenty percent of FBI hate crime totals in only four years since 1992, including each of the last three. From the mid 1990s until 2014, hate crimes have been incrementally declining, interrupted by a record spike in 2001 to 9,730 incidents.

The cities with the highest per capita number of reports—often a sign of superior reporting practices and response—include Eugene, OR; Cincinnati, OH; Washington, DC; and Boston, MA.

CSHE-WVU EXCLUSIVE: FBI Reported Hate Crime Varies by Month, 1992-2017

► Over the last decade, the worst months for reported hate crimes were around presidential elections in November 2016 (758, the worst in fourteen years) and October 2008 (722). August 2017, the month of the violent Charlottesville rally, at 663 incidents, was tied for the second worst month since November 2008, even though the homicide and assaults there were not reported as hate crimes.

The worst months overall for hate crime were September and October 2001, with almost 3,000 after the 9/11 attacks.

Hate crime assaults are based on data retrieved from FBI Hate Crime Statistics, 1996-2017. FBI data tracks simple and aggravated assaults as separate categories; CSHE combined these data into a single category of assaults.

 Hate crime data of nearly 1,500 law enforcement agencies from Kentucky, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and Texas were received after the publication deadline for Hate Crime Statistics, 2012, and thus not reflected in the numbers for 2012.

*The FBI started tracking anti-Arab hate crime as a separate category in 2015. Before that time, many anti-Arab assaults were classified as "anti-Non Hispanic."

► According to the FBI's latest 2017 national data released in November 2018, the most frequently targeted groups in the United States in 2017 were African Americans, 28 percent; the LGBT community, 17.4 percent; Jews, 13.1 percent; Whites, 10 percent; and Hispanics, 6 percent.

For African Americans, perennially the most targeted group, it was nonetheless the lowest percentage share of all hate crime since national record keeping began, at 28 percent. African Americans are thirteen percent of the population. For the LGBTQ community, it was the lowest share since 2006. For Jews, however, it was the highest share in five years and the highest overall total since 2008.

In 2017, all but five of the almost three dozen bias categories experienced increases. These include a 37 percent spike in anti-Jewish hate crime, a 16 percent rise in anti-Black hate crime, a 24 percent rise in anti-Latino crimes, a 63 percent increase in anti-Native American hate crime, and a doubling in anti-Arab hate crimes -- a category reintroduced in 2015. Anti-Arab hate crime increases came amidst moderate decreases in anti-Muslim hate crime, soon after the subcategory was reintroduced.

Anti-White rose only three percent while anti-Muslim hate crime, which hit its third highest year ever, actually dropped by 11 percent, after spiking 99 percent over the previous two years. In 2016, the FBI reported 6,121 incidents, with double digit percentage increases in hate crimes against Muslims, Latinos, Arabs, Transgender people, and Whites.

► A new Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) Hate Crime Victimization Survey saw reported hate crime (in orange) increase 2.9 percent to 107,900 in 2017 -- a smaller rise, but a much higher total than the FBI. BJS data, which estimates both reported and unreported crime, found, for the first time, that the majority of self-identified victims now report to police. The number of unreported hate crime declined by half so far this decade. The 2017 BJS trend for reported hate crime was similar to that of the FBI, hitting its highest level since 2009.

Bureau of Justice Statistics: Victims Reporting Hate Crime More

*Hate crime includes incidents confirmed by police as bias-motivated, and incidents perceived by victims to be bias-motivated because the offender used hate language or left behind hate symbols. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY V: CSHE—EXTREMIST AND MASS HOMICIDES

► In a CSHE curated data set of unofficial bigoted/extremist homicides, killings declined to 22 in 2018 as attacks by violent Salafist Jihadists fell sharply. Jews (for the first time) and African Americans were the most common victims and white nationalists/far right motivations were behind 17 of the fatalities, rising from 13 the year before.

► In 2018, the FBI counted 27 active shooter incidents of all motivations that resulted in 213 casualties. The shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida—with 17 killed and 17 wounded—represented the most deadly shooting that year, though it was not included in CSHE’s list of Extremist Homicides since it was not designated as such by law enforcement authorities (source).

CSHE: Bigoted/Extremist Homicides by Year & Motivation

*In 2016, forty-nine firearm fatalities were from one case, the mass shooting at Pulse Night Club in Orlando, Florida.

► Extreme misogyny—perpetrated by so-called “incels,” or “involuntary celibates”—motivated 1.6 percent of all ideologically-motivated homicides in the U.S. between 2016 and 2018. Self-proclaimed “incel,” Elliot Rodger, whose 2014 attack near the University of California, Santa Barbara, left six dead and 14 wounded, remains an influential figure for extreme misogynists, and has inspired more recent attackers. Among these are Scott Paul Beierle, who attacked a yoga studio in Tallahassee, Florida, in November 2018, killing two and injuring three more, and Alek Minassian, who ran down pedestrians in Toronto in April 2018, killing 10 and injuring 16 more (source).

Mass Attacks in Public Spaces – 2017 and 2018

► The were 27 incidents of domestic mass attacks—where three or more persons were harmed—in public places in 2018, one less than the previous year, according to the U.S. Secret Service National Threat Assessment Center. In 2018, fatalities declined by 38 percent to 91, while injuries fell to 107.

► In both 2017 and 2018, the most common instrument used for attacks was firearms, often wielded by perpetrators prohibited from legally possessing them—either through court-order, criminal record, age restriction, or some other factor.

General Backgrounds	2017	2018
Gender - Male	100%	93%
Age: Range	15-66	15-64
Average	37	37
Illicit drug use or substance abuse	54%	22%
History of criminal charge(s)	71%	48%
Non-violent	57%	37%
Violent	54%	22%
History of domestic violence	32%	30%
Overall history of violence	64%	44%
Mental health symptoms	64%	67%
Known treatment or diagnosis	25%	44%

In both years, places of business were the most common sites for mass attacks in public, with grievances being the leading motive. Attacks took place on every day of the week in both years, with more than half occurring between the hours of 7:00am and 3:00pm.

Across both years, all but two attackers were male, with one attacker being female and another in the process of gender reassignment. The average age of attackers in 2017 and 2018 was 37. However, the youngest attackers in both years were 15, while the oldest were 66 in 2017 and 64 in 2018.

In 2017, there were 147 innocent fatalities and nearly 700 injuries, with the Route 91 Massacre in Las Vegas being the worst. In 2018, fatalities declined 38 percent to 91 and 107 injuries. As an average, the loss of life per-incident changed between years from 5.25 in 2017 to 3.37 in 2018. Twenty-two of the attacks that occurred in 2017 resulted in harm to people who were not previously selected as targets by attackers, whereas that number fell to 16 in 2018. These findings illustrate the ability of attackers to inflict harm broadly upon the public, placing unintended targets in the line of fire, regardless of the attacker's aims.

Illicit drug use by perpetrators of mass attacks dropped from 54 percent to 22 percent between 2017 and 2018, along with a drop of over 20 percent of those with criminal histories. While a history of violence among the attackers decreased by 20 percent, mental health symptoms slightly increased from 64 percent to 67 percent. Among the differences in attacks between 2017 and 2018, the clearest was the change in locations of attacks over time. Houses of worship, transportation, schools, and open spaces such as parks, all decreased in occurrences. However, attacks on places of business rose from 13 to 20.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY VI: HATE MIGRATES AND INCREASES ONLINE

Hate Online: An Increasingly Radicalized and Fragmented Incubator

Assessing hate online often involves quantifying when certain bigoted terms and phrases are used. Data analyst Andrew Thompson built upon his prior research to exclusively assist CSHE in an analysis of the growth of the alternative platform, 4chan. 4chan is an alt-right leaning social media website where various hateful memes and rants originated or were disseminated, including the symbolic “Pepe the Frog” alt-right meme. There has been a mass migration of bigoted speech and extremism to more fragmented affinity or free speech platforms like 4chan, 8chan, GAB, VK \(Russian Facebook\), and Telegram, among others. The significant growth of engagement and bigoted speech on 4chan through election time 2016, followed by a partial retreat, is documented below.

1. Front runners Jeb Bush, Hillary Clinton and future Republican nominee Donald Trump launch campaigns: Mid-June 2015
 2. Then-Candidate Trump proposed first Muslim Ban: December 7, 2015
 3. Super Tuesday State Presidential Primaries: March 1, 2016
 4. Presidential Election: November 9, 2016
 5. Charlottesville “Unite the Right Rally”: August 12, 2017
- (Source: Andrew Thompson)

The numbers and types of hate terms used by 4chan members from January 2015 through March 2018 precipitously increased, before a partial decline to elevated levels. Various hate terms such as “k-ke” quadrupled, but other, newer terms like “white genocide” also increased. Mr. Thompson found the number of hateful terms on 4chan numbered in the hundreds of thousands on a monthly basis. Except for “white genocide” and “k-ke,” which had more precipitous increases, most other terms increased in approximation of the rising activity on 4chan generally, which has also fluctuated around certain events, such as the 2016 election. Over the last decade, many of the most notorious extremist mass killers have participated in, or were influenced by, bigoted content on social media before undertaking attacks in their home regions. Recently, terrorists used 8chan, Telegram, GAB, and Facebook around the time of their attacks.

Hate Term Frequency on 4chan: 2015-2018

CSHE Advisory Board Chair and West Virginia University Prof. James Nolan and Prof. Brian Levin combined the total hate speech 4chan data from Andrew Thompson with FBI data. CSHE then analyzed and weighted it to a scale of 8,000 to compare trends over time. While search engines often feature bigoted terms or their homonyms as queries by individual users, platforms like 4chan diverge somewhat to generally feature these terms as declarative conversational statements by often anonymous users.

Trends in 4chan Hate Messages with UCR Hate Crimes (weighted to scale) 2014-2018

► In July 2019, a VICE News analysis of over 1 million comments on 4chan's "politically incorrect" ("pol/") board, one of its most popular message boards, found that bigoted and sexist slurs increased by 40 percent since 2015.

4chan now has approximately 20 million monthly visitors, comparable to that of a major news site. The sites 8chan and NeinChan are more radical variants, created in response to perceived censorship, with users on these boards often posting even more extreme content than on 4chan.

However, bigotry on 4chan is still rampant, with hate speech comprising one out of every 15 comments posted on the site, 30 percent more than that found in comments on the neo-Nazi website Daily Stormer. While 8chan does not keep complete archives due, in part, to child pornography on many pages, 4chan keeps 15 pages of comments archived at any one time.

Another website, 4plebs, archives 4chan's "/pol/" message-board content back to 2014, and both VICE News and Mr. Thompson used it in their 4chan analysis. VICE News randomly selected about one million comments, searched them for common racial, homophobic, and ethnic slurs, along with white supremacist slogans, and violent search terms like "shoot," "kill," and "bomb."

Since a low point in 2016, the use of six slurs targeting racial and ethnic minorities and LGBTQ people has risen by 40 percent on the "politically incorrect" board. Because users often substitute alternative terms for racial slurs, these numbers almost certainly underestimate the true volume of such hate speech on the platform. VICE also found that the number of comments containing hateful and violent speech increased over the last three years by approximately 25 percent (source).

Hate Speech Online and Hate Crimes Across 100 U.S. Cities

► A New York University study examined online racial, ethnic, and national-origin discrimination patterns along with reported hate crimes in 100 U.S. cities, to see how online bias may vary by place, in comparison to hate crimes reported. While past analyses have shown that extremist violence correlates to an increase in online hate speech, the relationship of localized hate speech to hate crimes has been less examined.

The researchers distinguished between "targeted discrimination," described as someone being discriminatory, and "self-narration of discrimination," which is when someone shares his/her exposure to discrimination, either through personal experience, or witnessing someone else being discriminated against. The study indicates a relationship between patterns of social media discrimination and race, ethnicity, and national-origin based hate crimes. In those cities with outlier numbers of crimes, the proportion between hate crimes and self-narrated discrimination was also significant.

Hate Term Frequency on Google Trends: 2016-2018

► CSHE searched a variety of offensive and racist terms for different identity groups, finding that spikes in Google searches occurred around particular news events, including some stories involving race or religion. This mirrors similar findings by researchers at Princeton and CNN/HOPE Not Hate.

In October 2018, after U.S. President Donald Trump tweeted, "South African Government is now seizing land from white farmers," Google searches for "white genocide" increased. Following the shooting at the Tree of Life Synagogue on October 28, 2018 in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, searches for the phrase "hate jews" spiked to its peak popularity, reaching a value of 100, though some of those queries may have non-bigoted motivations.

Interest over time. Numbers represent search interest relative to the highest point on the chart for the United States from January 1, 2016 through June 19, 2019. A value of 100 is the peak popularity for the term. A value of 50 means that the term is half as popular. A score of 0 means there was not enough data for the term.

May 1, 2018 through May 31, 2019.

► According to Pew Research Center, approximately 28 percent of U.S. adults say they go online “almost constantly,” while another 45 percent say they go on “several times a day.” The number who go online “almost constantly” is higher among the 18-29 age group, at 48 percent.

Companies that Host Online Hate

► In July 2019, Gizmodo published a report on 151 tech companies that offer hosting, DNS registration, and content delivery network services for 391 websites for white supremacists, neo-Nazis, chapters of the Ku Klux Klan, neo-Confederates, black nationalists, and racist odinists. Of all the sites that Gizmodo inquired about, only 29 have been taken down, become inaccessible, or deleted all their content, since early June. In addition to the companies listed below, websites for six of the most popular white nationalist podcasts are distributed or do business with Google, GoDaddy, Endurance International Group, Corporate Colocation Inc., Veesp, Public Domain Registry, Cloudflare, Justhost.ru, DNC Holdings, OVH, Internet Domain Service BS Corp, Squarespace, and Epik (source).

Name of Company (and any subsidiaries)	Number of Sites it Hosts	Example/s of sites it hosts	Quote from Company Spokesperson	Action Taken
GoDaddy (subsidiary is Wild West Domains)	130	Registrar for 2 websites serving as fronts for the neo-Nazi music network Blood & Honour, founded by lead singer of the British white supremacist metal band Skrewdriver. In 2011, two Blood & Honour members were sentenced to life in prison for murdering a pair of homeless people in Florida, because they “considered the homeless to be an inferior class, regardless of race” according to law enforcement.	“GoDaddy does not condone content that advocates expressions of hate, racism, bigotry... We generally do not take action on complaints that would constitute censorship of content and limit the exercise of freedom of speech and expression on the Internet. While we detest the sentiment of such sites, we support a free and open Internet and, similar to the principles of free speech, that sometimes means allowing such tasteless, ignorant content.”	Did not sever its relationship with any of the sites.
Cloudflare	56		Cloudflare General Counsel Doug Kramer said, “It’s easy to point at sites you don’t like and make a single decision... But to come up with a consistent policy you can apply to the 16 million websites that use us for various services in a predictable and consistent way is very difficult.”
Tucows (subsidiary is eNom)	46
Endurance International Group (HostGator is part of this group)	42	HostGator hosts the website of the neo-Nazi Vanguard Streaming Network.
Google	27	Hosts three sites for neo-Nazi terrorist organization Combat 18, which is famous for multiple nail

Amazon	9
OVH (a French hosting company)	9	Hosts the website for a chapter of the KKK that features a picture of the incineration of a Jewish star on its homepage and a racist far-right German political party whose members shouted, "Heil Hitler" and threw bottles at police during a 2015 protest.	"Cloud infrastructure providers cannot be arbiters of morality."
Microsoft	5	Microsoft is host to mostly sites that are more mainstream than neo-Nazis, such as the Alliance Defending Freedom, likely one of the most influential anti-LGBTQ legal advocacy groups in the U.S.	Told Gizmodo that its cloud platform, Azur, is "general purpose" and meant to allow "customers to build and run their own cloud services." Also said, "We believe this core technology should be available broadly and not based on whether a customer's views align with our own." However, Microsoft said it did "reserve the right to suspend or terminate the customer's use of Azure" if that customer failed to remove illegal content or content that threatens the safety of others.
DreamHost	23	Was host to the National Alliance for Reform and Restoration Group, which has explicitly advocated for genocide against all non-whites in the U.S. since the group's founding in 1970.	"When private companies that control internet traffic begin to weigh in on questions of content, then the very fabric of what we know the internet to be, and how it can be expected to function, is placed at risk."	In the weeks since Gizmodo reached out to DreamHost about its relationship with the website of the National Alliance for Reform and Restoration Group, the group's page has been taken offline.
Automattic (runs Wordpress)	24	Had 8 sites operated by neo-Confederate League of the South Chapters.		Terminated 17 of the 24 sites, although two of the eight League of the South pages were allowed to continue operating as of July 11.
Network Solutions	38	Provides services to the Nationalist Socialist Movement's website, which the Southern Poverty Law Center calls "one of the most prominent neo-Nazi groups in the United States."	Taylor Michal Wilson had a Nationalist Socialist Movement business card in his possession when he attempted to hijack an Amtrak train in Nebraska in 2018 "to save the train from black people."
MarkMonitor	Registrar for 24 sites, though all were hosted on either Google's Blogspot platform or Automattic's Wordpress platform		A spokesperson told Gizmodo that MarkMonitor's relationship is with Blogspot and Wordpress directly, and it could only take down the 24 sites if it were to cut off registration to the entire Wordpress or Blogspot networks.

Targeted Online Hate Ahead of 2020 U.S. Presidential Election

► Early reports suggest that current U.S. Presidential Candidate Kamala Harris has been the target of an online campaign that questions her race and citizenship, which have been amplified by bots, and in one case, Donald Trump, Jr. Such claims were propagated by fringe websites, far-right conspiracy theorist Jacob Wohl, and neo-Nazi Andrew Anglin (source).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY VII: RUSSIAN SOCIAL MEDIA MANIPULATION CONTINUES

► As hate crimes, online bigotry, and conflictual protests increased in the lead up to the 2016 Presidential elections, so too did Russian interference as their racially divisive ad buys tripled in the months just prior to the vote. Intelligence and media reports state these efforts continue in this political season, as evolving technology enables malefactors to fake videos, use bots, and mask their identities.

Chart by Prof. John Reitzel

- "Divisive racial ad buys averaged about 44 per month from 2015 through the summer of 2016 before seeing a significant increase in the run-up to Election Day. Between September and November 2016, the number of race-related spots rose to 400. An additional 900 were posted after the November election through May 2017."
 - USA Today
- "Russia's social media efforts will continue to focus on aggravating social and racial tensions, undermining trust in authorities, and criticizing perceived anti-Russia politicians. Moscow may employ additional influence toolkits—such as spreading disinformation, conducting hack-and-leak operations, or manipulating data—in a more targeted fashion to influence US policy, actions, and elections."
 - Worldwide Threat Assessment of the Intelligence Community, Jan 29, 2019
- "...[C]ommunications between associates of Yevgeny Prigozhin, a Kremlin-linked oligarch indicted by special counsel Robert Mueller for previous influence operations against the U.S. — laid out a new plot to manipulate and radicalize African Americans. The plans show that Prigozhin's circle has sought to exploit racial tensions well beyond Russia's social media and misinformation efforts tied to the 2016 election."
 - NBC News
- "The IRA [Internet Research Agency] and its employees began operations targeting the United States as early as 2014. Using fictitious U.S. personas, IRA employees operated social media accounts and group pages designed to attract U.S. audiences. These groups and accounts, which addressed divisive U.S. political and social issues, falsely claimed to be controlled by U.S. activists. Over time, these social media accounts became a means to reach large U.S. audiences. IRA employees travelled to the United States in mid-2014 on an intelligence-gathering mission to obtain information and photographs for use in their social media posts."
 - Report On The Investigation Into Russian Interference In The 2016 Presidential Election (Mueller Report), March 2019
- "Collectively, the IRA's social media accounts reached tens of millions of U.S. persons. Individual IRA social media accounts attracted hundreds of thousands of followers....According to Facebook, in total the IRA-controlled accounts made over 80,000 posts before their deactivation in August 2017, and these posts reached at least 29 million U.S. persons and "may have reached an estimated 126 million people."

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY VIII: FLUCTUATIONS AROUND CATALYTIC EVENTS AND POLITICS

► Disaggregated FBI hate crime data analytics by CSHE-WVU revealed not only incremental trends, but also catalytic spikes around events such as terror attacks, international conflicts, police use-of-force, and elections. This correlation is not only found around historic events and hate crime, but between political rhetoric around events as well.

Six days after the terrorist attacks of September 11, President George W. Bush delivers remarks discouraging anti-Muslim sentiment at the Islamic Center of Washington, DC (George W. Bush Library).

World Trade Center site, September 2001. (U.S. Government/FEMA)

In 2001, the FBI did not collect data on anti-Arab crime as a separate category, so many anti-Arab perpetrated crimes were classified as "anti-Non Hispanic," a category that was renamed to "anti-Non Hispanic or Latino" in 2013. Source: FBI Hate Crime Statistics

Source: National Incident-Based Reporting System (NIBRS), Retrieved from National Archive of Criminal Justice Data by Prof. James Nolan/West Virginia University

The worst month for all hate crime, as well as anti-Muslim and anti-Arab (then subsumed into anti non-Hispanic) was around the 9/11 attacks in 2001, which killed over 3,000 Americans. Six days later, President George W. Bush delivered a short address to the nation late in the afternoon of September 17. It was subsequently widely broadcast and is considered a highlight of his presidency. Anti-Muslim hate crime dropped by two thirds the next day and for the calendar year 2002 as well.

"Like the good folks standing with me, the American people were appalled and outraged at last Tuesday's attacks. And so were Muslims all across the world. Both Americans and Muslim friends and citizens, tax-paying citizens, and Muslims in nations were just appalled and could not believe what we saw on our TV screens..."

America counts millions of Muslims amongst our citizens, and Muslims make an incredibly valuable contribution to our country. Muslims are doctors, lawyers, law professors, members of the military, entrepreneurs, shopkeepers, moms and dads. And they need to be treated with respect. In our anger and emotion, our fellow Americans must treat each other with respect..."

This is a great country. It's a great country because we share the same values of respect and dignity and human worth. And it is my honor to be meeting with leaders who feel just the same way I do. They're outraged, they're sad. They love America just as much as I do."

— President George W. Bush, Remarks at Islamic Center of Washington, DC on Sept. 17, 2001 (source)

► According to disaggregated FBI data, December 2015—the month of the San Bernardino terror attack and the initial Muslim ban proposal— was the third worst for anti-Muslim hate crime since records began. There was an additional 23 percent spike against Muslims and Arabs following the ban announcement and rally.

The San Bernardino terror attack of December 2, 2015 was the most fatal terror attack since September 2001, resulting in 14 innocent deaths and over 20 injuries. FBI-reported hate crimes against Muslims and Arabs spiked in the United States following the attack to over 300 percent above the average daily number for the first eleven months of the year.

After candidate Donald Trump introduced a Muslim Ban proposal five days later online and at a South Carolina rally, hate crimes spiked an additional 23 percent in the next ten days against Muslims and Arabs. The additional spike was over 400 percent higher than the daily average for the year's first eleven months. While there were no overall spikes, the month of December 2015 is still the third worst month for anti-Muslim hate crime, and the year saw a 67 percent increase in anti-Muslim hate crime. Mr. Trump's South Carolina poll numbers, however, went up eight percent right after the ban announcement.

"Donald J. Trump is calling for a total and complete shutdown of Muslims entering the United States until our country's representatives can figure out what is going on. According to Pew Research, among others, there is great hatred towards Americans by large segments of the Muslim population.... [I]t is obvious to anybody the hatred is beyond comprehension... Until we are able to determine and understand this problem and the dangerous threat it poses, our country cannot be the victims of horrendous attacks by people that believe only in Jihad, and have no sense of reason or respect for human life. If I win the election for President, we are going to Make America Great Again."

▶ According to research conducted by University of North Texas Professors Regina Branton and Valerie Martinez-Ebers, and PhD candidate Ayal Feinberg, there was a 226 percent increase in reported hate crimes in counties that hosted a Trump campaign rally in 2016, as compared to comparable counties that did not host Trump rallies (source).

According to research conducted by Tufts University, exposure to Donald Trump's statements about certain groups made people more likely to write offensive things, not only about the groups targeted by Trump, but about other identity groups as well (source).

There is "[g]reater overlap between white supremacist messaging and the rhetoric of major mainstream politicians, including common use of codewords such as "invaders" to denote immigrants."

► Donald Trump was elected the nation's forty-fifth president on November 8, 2016 with 304 electoral votes and 46 percent of the popular vote in a highly charged race (source).

According to disaggregated FBI data, November 2016 was the worst month for hate crime in fourteen years and November 9—the day after the election—the worst day since June 2003.

Many groups experienced a spike in FBI hate crime data during the 2016 election period with the official data mirroring that of advocacy organizations like the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC), which collected mostly non-criminal unofficial incident reports from an unvetted online submission platform. FBI anti-Latino hate crime spiked the most around election time, but did not rise in June 2015 when the President launched his campaign with a derisive discussion of Mexicans, amid a crowded field.

Anti-immigrant, however, was the most frequent target in the SPLC 2016 post-election sample, and like the FBI data, instances of all hate cases peaked in the days right after the election. The fourth quarter of 2016 was 26 percent above the same period 2015. In 2018, large cities had an increase in hate crime around election time, including a cluster of most of the year's killings.

► August 2017's Unite the right rally at a Charlottesville confederate monument, and a precursor event at the University of Virginia the evening before, were the largest public neo-Nazi violent far right demonstrations in decades, culminating in dozens of injuries and the murder of Heather Heyer by a since-convicted "alt-right" Nazi.

August 2017 is tied as the second worst month of the decade for FBI reported hate crime, and anti-Semitic and anti-Black speech also spiked on 4chan.

2017 saw the highest unadjusted percentage annual increase in FBI hate crime going back to 2001.

Following the horrific events, the president initially excluded specific condemnation of the armed and violent white supremacists, instead stating:

"We condemn in the strongest possible terms this egregious display of hatred, bigotry, and violence on many sides..."

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY IX: U.S. NGO DATA OVERVIEW – EXTREMIST GROUPS

Southern Poverty Law Center: Hate Groups by Year 1999-2008

Source: Southern Poverty Law Center

► Increases were also seen in unofficial data sets from U.S. non-governmental organizations (NGOs) relating to both incidents and hate groups. The Southern Poverty Law Center \(SPLC\), an Alabama-based civil rights NGO focused primarily on tracking right-wing and racial extremism, recorded a seven percent rise in “hate groups” to a record 1,020 last year, and a 30 percent increase since 2014’s decade low of 784. In 2018, the number of white nationalist groups rose 48 percent.

SPLC states far right and white nationalist extremist homicides rose from 17 in 2017 to 40 in 2018 in the U.S. and Canada. SPLC cites a “mainstreaming of hate” by intolerant politicians, cable news celebrities, and various groups, along with fears over demographic change and immigration, as factors influencing a “flourishing” white supremacist movement (source).

White Supremacist Propaganda Efforts on U.S. College Campuses

► During the 2018-2019 school year, the Anti-Defamation League \(ADL\) documented 313 cases of white supremacist propaganda on campus, a 7 percent increase from the 2017-2018 school year, when 292 cases were documented.

While on-campus propaganda incidents have increased moderately between the 2017-2019 and 2018-2019 school years, the number of off-campus propaganda incidents have soared. During January through May 2019, ADL counted 672 off-campus propaganda incidents, compared to 868 incidents for the entire 2018 year (source). Some groups have engaged in pamphleteering and vandalism with their propaganda, and have posted the photos on social media.

► In 2018, anti-Semitic “incidents,” including non-criminal events, tracked by the Anti-Defamation League (ADL), a national New York-based Jewish-oriented NGO, totaled 1,879, a five percent decrease over 2017’s total of 1986; however, physical attacks increased by 105% to 59 victims, after falling in 2017.

Even with the moderate overall decline, 2018 was the most fatal year ever, and the third-highest overall total since ADL record-keeping commenced in 1979. 2018 totals represent a 99 percent increase over 2015. In 2017, the ADL’s overall total rose the most ever, by 57 percent, to the second-highest level since 1979. Similar to other data, ADL saw a multi-year decline reversed around 2014, before rising 35 percent in 2016.

According to ADL’s latest data for 2018:

- 1,066 harassment incidents, up five percent over 2017, when there were over 150 bomb threats by one defendant;
- 774 acts of vandalism, a 19 percent decrease from 2017’s 952 acts of vandalism, when they rose 86 percent;
- The 249 anti-Semitic incidents “attributed to known extremist groups or individuals inspired by extremist ideology” represented the highest levels of such incidents since 2004, and 13 percent of incidents overall, with 50 percent of those targeting institutions.
- States ranked by most incidents: California, 341 (268/2017); New York, 340 (341/2017); New Jersey, 200 (208/2017); Massachusetts, 144 (177/2017); Florida, 76 (98/2017); and Pennsylvania, 89 (96/2017) (source).

In 2018, the ADL found domestic extremists killed at least 50 people in the U.S., with almost all perpetrated by right wing assailants, up from 37 “extremist-related homicides” (which also include non-ideological crimes) in 2017, compared to 72 in 2016 and 70 in 2015. Like CSHE data and those from other NGOs and researchers, ADL saw a spike in hate cases around the 2016 elections (source).

In 2018, the ADL registered a 182 percent increase in incidents involving distribution of racist, anti-Semitic, and Islamophobic fliers, stickers, banners, and posters from 2017, with 1,187 cases reported, compared to 421 in 2017, including 319 at colleges, as large public demonstrations declined after August 2017's Charlottesville rally (source).

► In 2018, the American Jewish Committee (AJC), a Jewish-oriented American NGO, in a survey of Jewish Americans, found 55 percent felt “less secure than a year ago,” while 53 percent said the climate on college campuses was “more hostile” than toward “pro-Israel” students (source).

The Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany and Schoen Consulting's national study of Holocaust awareness among Americans found 11 percent of adults and 22 percent of millennials had not heard, or were not aware if they had heard, of the Holocaust.

The study further found 45 percent of all American adults and 49 percent of millennials could not identify a concentration camp, while 41 percent of all adults and 66 percent of millennials could not identify what Auschwitz was.

The Kantor Center at Tel Aviv University found that major violent anti-Semitic incidents in 2018 rose 13 percent worldwide to 387, from 342 in 2017, but well below 2014's total of 766. The United States had the most at 101, followed by the United Kingdom at 68, and France and Germany with 35 each (source).

► Anti-Muslim hate crime incidents tracked by the Council on American Islamic Relations (CAIR), a national Muslim-oriented NGO, decreased 55 percent, from 300 in 2017 to 134 in 2018, following a previous 15 percent increase between 2016 and 2017. CAIR's 2017 numbers roughly aligned with FBI totals, according to the organization's 2018 Civil Rights Report. In 2016, CAIR enumerated a 44 percent increase, from 180 to 260.

Incidents involving physical violence constituted 32 of the hate crimes tracked in 2018, while 40 incidents involved vandalism and property destruction. In 2017, physical violence constituted 107 of the hate crimes tracked, more than one third of all, with slightly more vandalism and property destruction, at 113. CAIR also documented 144 anti-Mosque incidents in the United States in 2017, with hate crimes accounting for 57 incidents, intimidation for 42 incidents, and harassment for 24 incidents (source).

► In May 2019, a Muslim-oriented domestic policy NGO, the Institute for Social Policy and Understanding (ISPU)'s National American Islamophobia Index, which tracks perceptions of five bigoted tropes among the public, rose from 24 to 28 out of 100 (source).

Previously Pew Research Center found an improvement in domestic polls about perceptions of Muslims in 2017, but they remained the least positively regarded faith group, particularly by older, less educated, and more conservative respondents.

► South Asian Americans Leading Together (SAALT), an NGO that advocates for South Asians in the United States, recorded 213 “hate incidents” against “those who identify or are perceived as South Asian, Muslim, Sikh, Hindu, Middle Eastern, and Arab between November 8, 2016 and November 7, 2017... [compared to] 130 hate incidents... between November 1, 2015 and November 7, 2016.”

While SAALT found that physical attacks rose in the one year commencing around election time 2016—from 64 to 71—the greatest percentage increases were found in “verbal/written assaults” and vandalism or property damage. SAALT’s online database “documented 89 instances of xenophobic political rhetoric from news sources aimed at South Asian, Muslim, Sikh, Hindu, Middle Eastern, and Arab communities during the year after the 2016 presidential election,” a 32 percent increase over the year before the 2016 election (source).

► In 2018, the national NGO, Sikh Coalition’s legal team experienced “a dramatic spike in legal intakes related to school bullying,” with more cases in the 2017-18 school year than the previous three years combined (source).

► The Arab American Institute (AAI), an Arab American oriented Washington, DC-based NGO, found reporting issues related to a variety of factors, but noted that it was not until 2015 that anti-Arab bias was once again specifically added to FBI data guidelines after a multi-year absence (source).

AAI found 23 states have statutes that require law enforcement agencies to report hate crimes, collect data, and publish annual statistics. Only 15 states have statutes that require hate crime training for police certification, while 37 states publish annual hate crime statistical reports. AAI found the absence of “lack of state-level requirements for reporting, data collection, and law enforcement training contribute to underreporting of hate crime incidents nationwide.” AAI concluded the “failure of state legislatures to enact sufficient protections for hate crime victims also contributes to underreporting” (source).

Antifa Violence

► While there were crimes and assaults committed by Antifa or hard-left adherents, there were no fatalities by their adherents in 2018 or 2017. Assaultants from antagonist groups, such as the Proud Boys, have also been violent at various rallies.

In July 2019, Senator Ted Cruz wrote a letter to FBI Director Christopher Wray urging an investigation on Antifa under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), a law originally passed to combat Mafia groups (source).

► In now-deleted tweets, progressive activist Shaun King said of an armed Antifa-linked attacker of an immigration detention facility in Tacoma, Washington: “Willem Van Spronsen just became the first martyr attempting to liberate imprisoned refugees from a for-profit detention center.” Of Van Spronsen, King also said, “His actions will be called terrorism and people will call him crazy, but neither are true.” King also called Van Spronsen’s online manifesto about the attack, “beautiful” (source).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY XIV: HATE CRIME PROSECUTIONS

► Most hate crimes are prosecuted under state law and there is a relatively low conviction rate. The U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) charged over 300 defendants from 2008 through 2018 under federal hate crime laws. In fiscal year 2018, the federal DOJ charged 27 defendants in 22 cases, resulting in 30 convictions (source).

Since January 2017, DOJ’s Civil Rights Division has indicted 16 defendants and obtained 11 convictions in cases involving arson and other attacks or threats against places of worship. The Civil Rights Division also obtained 13 indictments and nine convictions for hate crimes perpetrated against people for their religious beliefs (source).

Federal Hate Crime Prosecutions

*Two categories of hate crimes – as tracked and reported by the USDOJ LIONS (Legal Information Office Network System) database – are included in the chart above: 1) Racial Violence Including Hate Crimes, and 2) Hate Crimes Arising out of Terrorist Attacks.

Numbers of “referrals declined” and “convictions” are sometimes higher than “referrals received” or “prosecutions filed” because the disposition of a case, e.g. dismissal or conviction, may occur in a different year from which the case was filed. Cases may be dismissed for a variety of reasons, including lack of evidence or the expiration of the statute of limitations.

New York State Hate Crime Prosecutions

*Offenders age 18 and under at the time of crime may be adjudicated as youthful offenders (see Criminal Procedure Law 720.10). A youthful offender (YO) adjudication broadens sentencing options and seals the criminal record. Source: Hate Crime in New York State 2016 Annual Report

California Hate Crime Prosecutions

► Out of 1,066 hate crime reports in 2018, California district attorneys and elected city attorneys filed 314 criminal cases, with 228 of those filed under state hate crime law. At time of publication, disposition data for 103 cases was available, as final dispositions oftentimes occur in a different year than the crime or the filing of the charges.

Texas Hate Crime Prosecutions

► Between September 1, 2001 and June 21, 2019, 24 cases were filed in Texas under the state’s hate crime laws, and there was an affirmative finding that a hate crime had occurred in 20 of them (source).

► According to the Pennsylvania Human Rights Commission (PHRC), the top three types of offenses in Philadelphia in 2018 were vandalism, terroristic threats, and harassment. One person in 2019 has been charged with “Ethnic Intimidation,” what Pennsylvania’s law terms a hate crime (source).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY XV: HATE CRIMES UNDERREPORTING

► In 2017, only 12.6 percent of all participating jurisdictions reported a hate crime to the FBI. Police in 92 of the 310 U.S. cities with populations over 100,000 did not report a single hate crime that year. Some large cities, such as Miami, Honolulu, and Las Vegas, reported no hate crimes to the FBI. While Las Vegas counted 61 hate crimes, it did not report these to the FBI. Miami reported 10 hate crimes to CSHE in 2018, marking the first time this decade it reported any, even though police intake forms indicate possible misclassifications (see police report on next page).

Currently, reporting to the FBI is voluntary. Nevertheless, an increase in the number of reporting agencies indicates a possible growing awareness among law enforcement agencies of the importance of identifying and reporting hate crimes.

In 2016, 15,254 agencies submitted data to the FBI, which covered a population of 289,814,003. Based on U.S. Census estimates for the population in 2016 (323,071,342), 33,257,339 people \(10.3 percent of the U.S. population\) from non-reporting jurisdictions were not included in the FBI's hate crime report for that year. In 2017, the number of agencies reporting to the FBI increased by 5.5 percent, at 16,149, covering a population of 306,435,676, with 5.8 percent of the U.S. population's \(325,147,121\) hate crimes remaining unreported to the FBI.

Source: ADL; FBI Hate Crime Statistics 2017

► According to the Bureau of Justice Statistics, more victims are reporting hate crimes, but misidentification—or failure to identify a crime as motivated by bias—remains a significant obstacle to accurate data collection.

► According to BJS data, between 2013 and 2017, there were 204,600 annual hate crime victimizations on average; however, victims only reported 49.8 percent (101,900) of these victimizations to police (although now the majority report), and only identified 44.7 percent \(45,600\) of these victimizations as hate crimes to police. Out of these, police confirmed a hate crime one third of the time \(15,200\). In 2017, the FBI officially reported 7,175 hate crimes, which represents just 3.5 percent of the average annual hate crime victimizations reported to the BJS in its National Crime Victimization Survey (NCVS) (source).

The issue of misidentification may be due in part to the open-ended nature of the FBI's guidelines on how to identify a hate crime. In order to qualify as a "hate crime," the offense must be motivated "in whole or in part" by the offender's bias. In many instances, it may be the case that police officers label crimes as hate crimes when they are committed "in whole" by the offender's bias, rather than those that may only be motivated "in part" by the offender's bias.

In addition, some police departments may conflate gathering data on hate crime reports with prosecuting hate crimes. To successfully prosecute a hate crime offender, district attorneys must prove the offender's motivation in court. As such, district attorneys are often hesitant to charge offenses as hate crimes in the first place (source).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY XVI: FALSE HATE CRIME REPORTS

The 2018 number is based on a CSHE estimate.

Actor Jussie Smollett's mugshot from his Feb. 21, 2019 arrest for allegedly staging his own assault and filing a false report to Chicago police.

Source: Chicago Police Department

► False hate crime reports in the U.S. fell from 28 in 2017 to 11 in 2018, constituting 0.14 percent of an estimated 7,600 reported hate crimes. In 2018, most were committed by college students and teenagers.

CSHE's enumeration criteria is:

- 1) an allegation or commission of a crime in the U.S.,
- 2) reported, generally by "target," to police or administrative authority (e.g. university administrators or campus police) as hate motivated crime,
- 3) but, discovered to either:
 - not have been committed as alleged, or
 - to have been committed by the reporting actor against his/her self, own immediate home/residential area, house of worship, workplace, or campus community, with one primary motive being false appearance as a hate crime.

△ Many web-circulated lists of purported "hoaxes" include non-criminal incidents, opinion columns, cases outside the U.S., multiple listings of single incidents, as well as cases of actual hate crimes, or instances where no report was made, or bias motivation alleged. Other lists have not been made public.

The total white population, which includes white Hispanics and white non-Hispanics, comprises 78.9 percent (258,080,572) of the total population, and had the largest numeric increase between 2017 and 2018 \(1,055,588\).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY XVIII: ASSESSMENTS OF INTERGROUP RELATIONS

► According to an Associated Press-NORC Center Poll conducted in February 2017, many Americans view political polarization as the greatest threat to the American way of life (53 percent), followed closely by the nation's political leaders (48 percent), and illegal immigration (47 percent). Legal immigration is viewed as the least threatening (source).

► 85 percent of Americans say the tone and nature of political debate in the U.S. has grown more negative, while 55 percent say President Donald Trump has changed the tone and nature of political debate in the U.S. for the worse. 78 percent of Americans say that heated and aggressive language from elected officials about certain groups of people makes violence against them more likely, while 73 percent say elected officials should avoid using heated language because it could encourage violence (source).

Source: Pew Research Center

► In a CBS Poll conducted in January 2019, 65 percent of respondents said the U.S. is on the wrong track. Among those who said the nation is on the wrong track, 64 percent said it's due to the state of politics and the government. Of the 30 percent who said the nation is headed in the right direction, 67 percent of respondents said it's due to the country's economic situation (source).

Source: CBS News Poll

► Greater political polarization was reflected in a 2017 Pew poll, which showed more Americans are either on the left or the right, but fewer (one-third) hold a mix of positions. This is down from 2004, when nearly half of Americans held a mix of political positions (source).

► According to data from the Manifesto Project, a research organization that reviews and categorizes political parties' manifestos, the Republican Party leans farther right than most conservative parties in Western Europe and Canada, including Britain's Independence Party and France's National Rally, both of which are considered by some to be far-right populist parties. In contrast, the Democratic Party is positioned closer to mainstream political parties in Western Europe (source).

Source: The New York Times

► Similarly, Pew found wide partisan gaps in views of discrimination against many groups, with 75 percent of Democrats saying that there is “a lot” of discrimination against Muslims, while only 35 percent of Republicans said the same. Results were also stark between voters of each party with regard to views on discrimination against Blacks, Women, Gays and Lesbians, and Hispanics (source).

Source: Pew Research Center

► While Gallup found that Americans' confidence in long-standing institutions has steadily declined between 1978 and 2016, Pew also found stark partisan differences regarding the impact of these institutions. While 72 percent of Democrats say that colleges and universities have had a positive impact on the way things are going in the U.S., 36 percent of Republicans said the same. Similarly, 85 percent of Republicans said the national news media had a negative impact on the way things are going, while 46 percent of Democrats said the same.

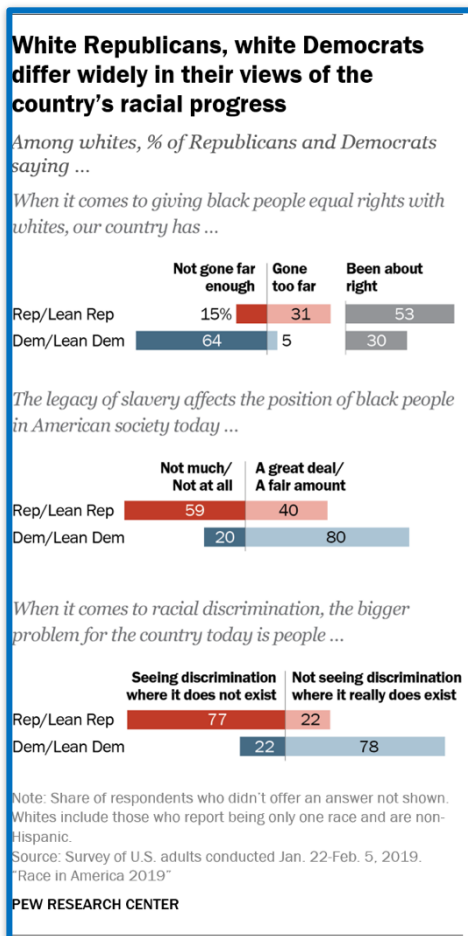

*Trends reflect respondents who answered, "Quite a lot" and "Great Deal" of confidence in respective institutions. Source: Gallup

Source: Pew Research Center

► Pew similarly found wide partisan differences in views of the nation's racial progress, with 31 percent of Republicans saying that the U.S. has "gone too far" in giving black people equal rights with whites, while 64 percent of Democrats say the U.S. has "not gone far enough" (source). Along those lines, Pew also found that among all Americans, 61 percent said people generally do not agree on what is considered racist language (source).

Source: Pew Research Center

Source: Pew Research Center

► An AP-NORC Center Poll also found wide disparities between whites and blacks on their views of racial progress and achieving equal treatment for African Americans. In particular, 39 percent of whites said that little or no progress had been made in achieving fair treatment by police, while 73 percent of blacks said the same. 66 percent of blacks said little or no progress had been made in achieving equality for African Americans' treatment in the criminal justice system, while 40 percent of whites said the same (source).

► However, in 2019, more Americans also say discrimination and lack of access to education are to blame for why some African Americans have worse jobs, income, and housing than whites (source).

Source: Associated Press

► Among all Americans, 62 percent said men have a large or some advantage in getting ahead in the U.S. 60 percent said whites have a large or some advantage, while the same percentage said that Muslims face a large or some disadvantage in getting ahead in this country (source). In a Pew poll, greater percentages of blacks, Hispanics, and Asians than whites said being white helps a little or a lot in a person's ability to get ahead in this country (source).

► 88 percent of Americans believe that a fair judicial system and the rule of law are extremely or very important to the United States' identity, while 84 percent say the same about individual liberties and freedoms, and 79 percent say the same about the ability of people to get a good job and achieve the American dream. The lowest percentage (33 percent) said a culture established by the country's early European immigrants is very or extremely important to the United States' identity as a nation (source).

► The Percent of Americans who say white people are under attack in the U.S. has risen to 43 percent in 2018, up from 39 percent in 2017. The number who say racial minorities are under attack in the U.S. has also risen, to 57 percent in 2018, up from 54 percent in 2017. While 23 percent said they didn't know whether they supported the alt-right in 2017, a greater number (28 percent) in 2018 said the same. The number of people who said they strongly or somewhat support neo-Nazism went up by one percentage point in 2018, to 5 percent, while the number who strongly or somewhat support white nationalism has also gone up one percentage point in 2018, to 8 percent.

► Americans expressed similar levels of support for the alt-right in a poll taken immediately after the Unite the Right Rally in Charlottesville, where Heather Heyer was killed in August 2017. This may be due to a lack of widespread knowledge on the connection between the alt-right and neo-Nazism, as 83 percent said that holding Nazi views is unacceptable, though only 41 percent of respondents said they have no opinion on the alt-right. 39 percent of respondents said they had no opinion on whether the alt-right holds Nazi views, while the same percentage said the alt-right did not hold Nazi views.

► In the same poll, the percentage of southern voters who strongly oppose the removal of Confederate monuments and statues from public spaces rose two percentage points in 2019, to 46 percent, and the percentage who strongly support removing the statues went down by three percentage points, to 20 percent (source). An April 2019 Pew Poll found that 52 percent of blacks said being black is extremely or very important to how they think about themselves, whereas only 5 percent of whites said being white was extremely or very important to their identity (source).

► What matters most to southern voters has changed in 2019 to immigration, with 24 percent saying it is the top issue, up from 16 percent last year. The top issue in 2018 was jobs and the economy, at 27 percent (source). A July 2019 Gallup poll of all Americans also yielded immigration as the most important U.S. problem (27 percent) (source). A CBS poll yielded somewhat similar results, though the difference was more partisan, with 75 percent of Republicans specifying that illegal immigration is a very serious problem (source).

► A Gallup poll from January 2016, listed terrorism as the most important issue facing the U.S. (16 percent), though dissatisfaction with the government placed second in both the 2019 and 2016 Gallup polls. The difference in perceptions of the most important U.S. problem likely has to do with political events widely covered in media: immigration has dominated headlines recently, and terrorism dominated headlines in January 2016, following the November 2015 San Bernardino terrorist attack and the December 2015 “Muslim Ban” announcement by then-Presidential Candidate Donald Trump (source).

► A Gallup Poll found increased opposition to gay relationships in 2019. A 2018 Harris Poll commissioned by GLAAD (below) found a decline in comfort and acceptance of LGBTQ people by respondents ages 18-34, with a steady decrease of “allies”—defined as either “very” or “somewhat” comfortable in all LGBTQ-related interaction scenarios—among this audience since 2016 (source).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY XIX: ANTI-SEMITISM IN EUROPE & CANADA

Latest International Official and NGO data

► In the UK, the Community Security Trust (CST) recorded 1,652 anti-Semitic incidents in 2018, the highest total ever recorded by the NGO in a single calendar year. This marked a 16 percent increase from the prior record of 1,420 anti-Semitic incidents in 2017. Nearly three-quarters of the 1,652 anti-Semitic incidents in 2018 were recorded in Greater London and Greater Manchester, homes to the two largest Jewish communities in the UK.

In Greater London alone, CST recorded 950 anti-Semitic incidents in 2018, a rise of 21 percent from the 784 incidents recorded in 2017. CST recorded a 17 percent decrease in the number of violent anti-Semitic assaults, down from 149 in 2017 to 123 in 2018. ► Canada saw a 16.5 percent increase of anti-Semitic incidents in 2018, with a total of 2,041. Quebec and Ontario, home to the largest Jewish populations in Canada, maintained the highest levels of incidents overall, though Quebec saw a 49.6 percent increase, and Ontario a 40.5 percent increase, from the year prior. According to Public Safety Canada's most recently available statistics, hate crime incidents reached an all-time high in 2017, with Jews the most frequently targeted religious group (source).

► According to the Moshe Kantor Database for the Study of Contemporary Antisemitism and Racism, the number of major violent cases of anti-Semitism around the world has increased by 13 percent in 2018, from 342 in 2017 to 387. The countries with the highest number of cases were the United States (over 100 cases), the United Kingdom (68), France and Germany (with 35 each), Canada (20), Belgium (19), the Netherlands (15), and Argentina (11). To count as a “major violent incident,” the incident needed to have anti-Semitism as a proven motivation (source).

A newly-released report compiled by the Institute for Jewish Policy Research, based on an EU survey of more than 2,700 Jewish Europeans between the ages of 16 and 24 living in 12 EU member countries, points to a troubling rise in anti-Semitism on the continent. The study reports that nearly half of young Jewish Europeans have considered moving away from their home countries out of fear for their safety. Nearly 80 percent of people surveyed consider anti-Semitism to be a problem in their countries and at least half experienced at least one anti-Semitic incident in the year prior (source).

UNHCR: Global Refugee Trends in 2018

► According to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees \(UNHCR\), the global population of forcibly displaced people increased by 2.3 million in 2018 to a record high total of 70.8 million people, displaced as a result of persecution, conflict, violence, or human rights violations.

In 2018 alone, an estimated 13.6 million people were newly displaced due to conflict or persecution, which includes 10.8 million who were displaced within the borders of their own country and 2.8 million new refugees and asylum-seekers. This is equivalent to an average of 37,000 people being forced to flee their homes every day of 2018.

Half of the refugee population in 2018 was comprised of children below 18 years of age, up from 41 percent in 2009, but similar to the previous few years. Lebanon continued to host the largest number of refugees relative to its national population, with 1 out of every 6 people being a refugee, with Jordan (1 in 14) and Turkey (1 in 22) ranking second and third, respectively. More than two thirds of all refugees came from the Syrian Arab Republic (6.7 million), Afghanistan (2.7 million), South Sudan (2.3 million), Myanmar (1.1 million), and Somalia (0.9 million) (source).

Hate Crime in Canada

► Hate crimes in Canada decreased by 13 percent in 2018 with 1,798 reported incidents, down from a 47 percent rise in 2017. 2017 was a record year with 2,073 reported incidents. The 2018 decline broke an upward trend in Canadian hate crime that commenced in 2014, but 2018 totals are the second highest number of hate crimes since 2009.

With major declines in Ontario, the number of hate crimes targeting Muslims fell 50 percent in 2018, after previously spiking in 2017 due to large increases in Ontario and Quebec. There were also fewer reported hate crimes targeting the Black community \(12 percent decrease\), and fewer targeting members of the LGBTQ community \(15 percent decrease\). Hate crimes targeting the Jewish community declined by 4 percent in 2018, but still comprised 19 percent of all reports (source).

Developments Regarding LGBTQ Rights by Nation in 2019

Nation	Development
Kenya	In May 2019, Kenya's High Court unanimously upheld a law punishing gay sex with up to 14 years in prison.
Botswana	In June 2019, the High Court of Botswana struck down the country's sodomy law.
Angola	In January, Angola eliminated its sodomy law and passed legislation that punishes discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation with up to two years in prison.
Brunei	In April, a law took effect that punishes homosexuality and adultery with death by stoning, though the country's leader, Sultan Hassanal Bolkiah, has vowed not to enforce it.
Taiwan	In May, Taiwan became the first place in Asia to allow same-sex couples to marry, though the law does limit the ability of same-sex couples to adopt.
China	Until recently, the Chinese government allowed LGBT advocacy as long as the activities didn't appear overtly political; however, officials have now begun denying gay-rights groups permission to register as NGOs, citing "ethical concerns" and the police have been harassing activists.
Russia	Over the past two years, police in Russia have reportedly abducted and tortured over 100 people in the Chechnya region. The Russian government has not yet fully investigated the abuses, though it promised to do so.
Bulgaria	Courts began to refuse legal gender recognition of transgender people.
Poland	Enacted rules that deny in-vitro fertilization for lesbian couples and unmarried women.
Ecuador	Became the latest country in the Americas whose constitutional court recognized same-sex couples' right to marriage equality.
Costa Rica	Last year, Costa Rica's court ordered that marriage equality legislation be enacted within 18 months.
Chile	Chile has recently updated its gender recognition laws.
Uruguay	Uruguay has recently updated its gender recognition laws.
Guyana	Guyana's law, which criminalized the wearing of gender-nonconforming clothing, was struck down by the Caribbean Court of Justice.
The Vatican	In June 2019, a Vatican education committee denounced what it described as "calls for public recognition of the right to choose one's gender, and of a plurality of new types of unions." Vatican diplomats at the United Nations oppose the use of the word "gender" in international agreements, as anti-LGBTQ groups see use of that term as a way to broaden rights protections.
The United States	The State Department under the Trump Administration has worked closely with anti-LGBTQ organizations and has opposed the use of words like "gender" in U.N. resolutions.
India	Last September, India's Supreme Court issued a landmark ruling that struck down the country's colonial-era law criminalizing gay sex. India is now considered a global leader in jurisprudence that protects the rights of gay men, lesbians, and transgender people.

CSHE Exclusive – Latest Major U.S. City Trends

► Hate crimes in thirty of America's largest cities rose nine percent in 2018 to a decade high of 2,009. Last year's increase was the fifth in a row, and greatest since 2015. Seventy percent, or 21 police departments, registered increases, with just under half (14 or 47 percent), hitting or tying decade highs. 2018 was the only year this decade those cities exceeded 2,000.

2018's total was 42 percent above 2010's total of 1,417, and 51 percent higher than 2013's decade low of 1,324. Moreover, full year increases reversed steep first-half declines. For some agencies with large percentage increases off of very low numbers of reports, much of the rise resulted from improved efficiencies known as "reporting effect."

2019 preliminary partial year-to-date hate crime data show significant overall increases of 25% over the same period last year, when a similar survey registered double digit percentage declines. The three largest U.S. cities—New York, Los Angeles, and Chicago—set the trend both years. Of the nine largest U.S. cities in 2019, six were up and three were down, with an overall increase of 33 percent, while 11 of 18 cities surveyed rose.

△ Because the majority of hate crimes for all of the last five years occurred during the second half of the year, it is likely that any increase this year will be eroded by year's end, as later comparisons will encompass 2018 election period increases.

*Los Angeles had two data sets which varied by 1 showing 133 and 134 hate crimes in the first six months of 2017, making declines 6.8% and 7.5%, respectively.

1st HALF 2018 DECLINES REVERSED BY 2nd HALF RISE & ELECTION TIME BUMP IN LARGEST CITIES

► In most of the cities with periodic breakdowns, hate crimes were significantly lower in the first half of 2018, only to have those declines eroded or reversed by the end of the year. Many, but not all, cities had spikes in the fourth quarter or around mid-term election time – particularly in some of the nation’s largest cities.

Larger “blue” cities outside of the southernmost latitudes were most likely to experience election time increases, something not traditionally seen around midterms. New York City hate crimes went up 17 percent between October 28 and December 9, 2018, while in Philadelphia, one quarter of the year’s hate crimes occurred in November. In Chicago, November was tied for the year’s worst month, while in Boston it was a close third. In both cities, November 2018 was higher than adjacent months. Other cities’ numbers, like Seattle, Dallas, and Portland, had declines from previous months, but increases over the previous November. In Los Angeles, hate crimes see-sawed up 62 percent (21 to 34) from October to November 2018, but that was below September’s total. Still, a smaller minority of cities in the southern portions of the country, particularly in San Diego, and the Texas and Arizona region, did not experience election-time spikes.

The six most populous U.S. cities were down 19 percent overall for the first half of 2018, but finished down, to less than three percent by year-end. For the first half year of 2018, overall crime also dropped according to FBI Uniform Crime Reporting figures, with violent crime decreasing 4.3 percent and property crime dropping by 7.2 percent.

For hate crimes, New York City went from a 17 percent decline to a 7 percent rise, while Chicago reversed a 23 percent decline into a 26 percent increase. Los Angeles also reversed a decline to record a 13 percent increase, with a fourth quarter increase of 32 percent over 2017.

► CSHE refrains from an official estimate, but finds that major U.S. cities overall are slightly more likely than not to sustain most or all of recent annual increases in 2019.

► For similar reasons, CSHE estimates that FBI national figures for 2018 are likely to sustain most or all of recent annual increases, with another increase somewhat more likely, though not assured. If FBI totals rise, it would only be the second time since 1992 that there has been a four-year consecutive increase.

Because the composition, crime rate, and density of cities differ from that of the nation as a whole, the data in our ten cities (above) will likely vary somewhat from FBI national data when it's released in November 2019.

The biggest percentage increases in our sample were anti-White, up 15.5 percent; anti-Jewish, up 9.3 percent; and anti-Gay, up 4.2 percent. The overall totals, however, gloss over marked differences in individual cities. For instance, owing to an over 50 percent drop in Phoenix, African Americans, the most targeted group, registered a decline overall. The three largest cities all registered double-digit increases for anti-African American hate crime, and would have driven the overall total up, but for Phoenix. Interestingly, in smaller cities, anti-Black crime trended lower.

The opposite was true for anti-Muslim crimes in 2018, which registered large declines overall, driven by drops in the largest cities, though there were increases in smaller ones. FBI enumerated anti-Muslim hate crime nearly doubled from 2014 through 2016, before a moderate drop in 2017. However, when combined with the newly reintroduced anti-Arab hate crime (as some offenders conflate), the total for both combined rose in 2017. Anti-Muslim assaults (which also decreased in 2017) were higher than in 2001, the peak year for anti-Muslim hate crime.

Jews, African Americans, and Gays tend to be represented in greater proportions in cities, while conversely, Whites have a lower representation. Last year, Whites, off of a much lower numerical base, nonetheless registered the biggest percentage increase, albeit off of a relatively small numerical increase. Still, a large unexplained decline in Phoenix moderated all increases and turned some small increases into small declines.

The cities were primarily selected by population, number of cases, availability of data, and geographic diversity. Variances not only exist with regard to demographics, but violent crime rates as well.

After four straight increases, hate crime in the ten largest American cities fell under one percent in 2018 to 1,030, due to the large anomalous decline in Phoenix. Totals exceeded one thousand for only the second time this decade, with seven of the top ten cities rising, and half hitting decade highs: Los Angeles, Chicago, Houston, Dallas, and Philadelphia. The 2018 total is 32 percent above 2010's total, and fifty percent above 2013's decade low of 684.

In 2017, the cities with the highest per capita number of FBI submitted reports—often a sign of superior reporting practices and response—include, Eugene, OR; Cincinnati, OH; Washington, DC; and Boston, MA.

Multi-City Hate Crime Survey By Bias Motivation

African Americans

Since federal record keeping began, African Americans have been the most frequent target (though in consistently diminishing proportions), and that remains so in our 2018 city survey. African Americans were yet again the top victim category in ten of fourteen cities with breakdowns, followed by LGBTQ in three cities (Seattle, Boston, and Sacramento), but also see Los Angeles and D.C., with Jews the top targets in one (New York), and Latinos in one as well (Indianapolis, Indiana). In 2018, in New York and Los Angeles, Blacks, Latinos, and Whites were among the most common identifiable suspects.

In the fourteen large cities with specific 2018 category breakdowns for our survey, African Americans were among the two most frequently targeted group in all of them, first in ten of them, and second in the remaining four. African Americans account for thirteen percent of U.S. residents, and generally more in the nation's largest cities. They are most frequently victimized by hate crime, constituting 28 percent of all hate crime according to the FBI in 2017.

In 2017, African Americans were the target of over 2,000 hate crimes on a 16 percent rise according to the FBI. Hate crimes against African Americans peaked in the summer of 1996 when racial stereotypes surrounded discussion on a controversial welfare reform bill during an election year. The second worst time was in the fall of 1995 during the O.J. Simpson trial.

Bias Motivation: Large US Cities 2018

Jews

In the most fatal anti-Semitic attack in American history, and the worst hate crime event of the year, eleven Jewish worshippers were murdered by a white supremacist in Pittsburgh on October 27, 2018. The attack was the latest and most deadly in a string of hate crime mass killings committed by loner domestic terrorists targeting congregants at houses of worship or religiously affiliated institutions. In our data breakdown by city, the Tree of Life Synagogue attack counts as one incident with eleven fatalities. Jews are twice as likely to be located in major cities relative to the nation as a whole. Previously, the five months with the highest number of FBI hate crimes were all during times of disputes between Israelis and Palestinians.

Jews were in the top three targets in five of fourteen large cities with hate crime target breakdowns available, and were, once again, the most targeted group in New York City, where one in six American Jews reside. Jews alone constituted the majority of all hate crime targets there, and at 188 anti-Semitic hate crimes (of which about 150 involved swastikas), those would rank above the individual city totals of all but three cities nationally.

America’s estimated 6.8 million Jews are about 2.1 percent of the nation’s population, but in the 21 top metro areas they constitute 4.4 percent of residents. The 2.14 million Jewish residents in the New York-Northern New Jersey metro area are 10.6 percent of the region’s population and constitute 31 percent of the nation’s Jews.

The Los Angeles-Orange County, CA metro area is second with 617,000 Jews, for a 4.6 percent share of the population. The Miami-Fort Lauderdale-West Palm Beach metro area, with 565,000 Jews, has the third largest Jewish population, making up 9.4 percent of the region. The San Francisco Bay area is 6.4 percent Jewish, and metro Chicago is 3.1 percent Jewish, despite both areas having around 295,000 Jews. The four-state Philadelphia-Camden-Wilmington metro area closely follows in sixth place, with 292,000 Jews or 4.8 percent of the area’s residents.

GALLUP

In Los Angeles, anti-Gay Male crimes were the second most common, but when all categories of anti-LGBTQ crimes are combined, they total 70, compared to anti-Black at 61. In New York, there were 45 anti-Gay hate crimes in 2018, tied for second place with anti-Black. Anti-Gay hate crime rose 4 percent in our ten-city sample, increasing in six cities in 2018.

According to Gallup, 4.1 percent of the adult population or ten million adults identified as LGBTQ in 2016, but the number was higher among millennials, where the percentage was 7.3 percent. Non-whites were more likely to identify as LGBTQ than Whites, with Latinos having the highest proportion. Cities with large estimated LGBTQ communities also frequently have higher proportions of anti-LGBTQ crimes. Earlier in 2011, Gary Gates of UCLA Law School's Williams Institute estimated the nation's LGBTQ community at 3.8 percent, with 0.3 percent of this share being transgender. The study also indicated that the community comprised slightly more females than males (source).

Anti-White

Anti-White hate crime was in the top five in eight of the 14 cities with breakdowns available, and accounted for 9.3 percent of those targeted, edging out Latinos for the fourth most common victim group. Anglo (non-Hispanic) Whites represent a lower proportion of the population in the larger cities than they do in the nation as a whole, where they constitute 61 percent of the population. None of the fifteen largest American cities exceed the national percentage, and only three had majority White populations. Whites were in the top three most targeted groups in only three cities in our survey, all with majority White populations – Columbus, Seattle, and Pittsburgh. Whites, however, are still under-represented relative to their share of the population.

Anti-White hate crime rose in six of ten sample cities and, at 15 percent, had the biggest increase of any of the groups analyzed in 2018. In 2017, FBI reported anti-White hate crime rose three percent to 744, on top of a 17 percent rise from the previous year.

Anti-Latino

Anti-Latino hate crime was in the top 5 of the 14 cities with breakdowns available, and first in Indianapolis with ten; second in Los Angeles \(tied with Jews\) at 43; and second in Denver and San Jose, where the category tied with anti-Gay Male hate crime. In those cities with breakdowns, Latinos were in fourth place, at 9.1 percent, just behind Whites in our 2018 survey. In 2017, Latinos represented six percent of all FBI hate crime reports at 427, up 24 percent.

Latino Americans, however, make up a much smaller percentage of the population than non-Latino Whites. Latinos account for 17.8 percent of the population in the United States, but are even more represented in many of the nation's largest cities. Pew estimates that the Hispanic population of the United States grew from 14.5 million in 1980 to just under 58 million in 2016, accounting for half the nation's population growth since 2000. However, some of that growth has slowed in recent years. Pew states that 36 million, or 63 percent, of Latino Americans are of Mexican descent, followed by Puerto Rican residents, at 5.4 million (outside of Puerto Rico), followed by around two million each for Salvadorans, Cubans, and Dominicans in 2015.

Anti-Muslim & Arab

Anti-Muslim hate crime was in the top five categories for most frequent target in three of the 14 cities with breakdowns in 2018, although in Boston, the cases were combined into a mixed category with “anti-Arab.” There was, however, some nuance to these numbers in recent years. For instance, last year’s decline in ten large cities, down from 74 to 53, a 28 percent decrease, was largely driven by steep drops in the very largest ones. In the six smaller cities analyzed, however, the totals either increased or remained stable.

Moreover, and of significant note, 2017 FBI national data for anti-Muslim hate crime declined off of decade highs, but were “offset” by significant increases registered in the newly reimplemented “Anti-Arab” subcategory, which was added for the second time in 2015. In 2017, FBI reported anti-Muslim hate crime declined 11 percent from 308 to 275 after rising 99 percent over the previous two years. Moreover, the combined total of anti-Arab and anti-Muslim cases in 2017 FBI totals actually increased four percent to 378 from 364 the year before, on a doubling of anti-Arab hate crimes from 56 to 103.

While anti-Muslim hate crime peaked in September 2001, with 314 in just that one month and 481 for the entire year, the second worst annual total was in 2016, with 308. Disturbingly, however, anti-Muslim assaults, despite a 15 percent decline to 105 in 2017, still thirteen percent higher than the 2001 annual assault totals, when overall anti-Muslim hate crime hit a record. Anti-Muslim aggravated assaults accounted for over half of all those committed on the basis of religion in 2017. Anti-Muslim offenses overall, however, which are different from incidents (as one incident can consist of multiple offenses), only constituted 19 percent of all religious hate offenses in 2017, according to the FBI.

*Many states have statutes protecting constitutional or individual rights, but do not specify protected categories. We have included these statutes in each state's statute section, but have excluded these statutes for purposes of counting which categories each state's hate crime laws protect.

Many states have statutes that protect buildings or property, often specifying those used for religious services. We have designated those states that do protect buildings with , but have not counted these statutes as protecting "Interference with Religious Service" for the purposes of our chart.

^Some states designate "vulnerable victim" categories when the offender has committed an offense with bias due to the victim's real or perceived protected characteristic. For the purposes of our chart, we did not consider the "vulnerable victim" statutes to afford the same protections as bias categories designated in hate crime statutes, and have thus not counted those in our chart.

^^Some states' hate crime data collection laws mandate law enforcement agencies to keep track of crimes against individuals with certain identity characteristics that are not listed as protected categories in that state's hate crime law.

+Indiana's hate crime law allows the court discretion in sentencing the offender because he or she selected the victim based on a protected characteristic.

++While Louisiana's hate crime statute does not specifically enumerate political affiliation as a protected category, the law does afford protection for victims who have been targeted "because of actual or perceived membership or service in, or employment with, an organization," so we have included the state as protecting political affiliation in our chart.

+++Any violation of Wyoming's hate crime law constitutes a misdemeanor, the punishment for which is up to six months of prison time, a $750 fine, or both. Many advocacy groups omit Wyoming's hate crime law from their lists, but CSHE has chosen to include it in our chart because it does constitute a criminal statute, despite its relatively minor punishments in comparison with other states' hate crime laws.

++++South Carolina's hate crime laws only protect political affiliation, so we have designated the state as lacking a hate crime law.

Notes: Statutes listed are criminal statutes, not civil statutes (with the exception of a few administrative statutes requiring hate crime reporting or tracking). Statutes are current as of July 23. For pending legislation and updates at time of print, see below.

*In Missouri, SB373 would repeal the current statute's definition of the Holocaust, from "the period from 1933 through 1945 where 6 million Jews and millions of others were murdered in Nazi concentration camps as part of a structured, state-sanctioned program of genocide," to replace it with a new definition where "in Nazi concentration camps" is removed from the original statute's definition.

Key Hate Crime Cases

Barclay v. Florida, (1983), the United States Supreme Court upheld the death sentence of a black defendant given by a judge who invoked the defendant's racial motivation in committing random murder to foment a race war.

Dawson v. Delaware, (1992), the Supreme Court overturned a death sentence that was imposed for a murder by a prison escapee, because it was made in part on the basis of his membership in a white supremacist group. Because no connection existed between the defendant Dawson's racist beliefs and associations, and his opportunistic killing while on the run, the Court held that mere abstract racist ideology was an impermissible basis to impose criminal liability.

R.A.V. v. St. Paul, (1992), the Supreme Court unanimously invalidated a 1989 municipal "hate speech" ordinance used to prosecute a teenage skinhead for burning a cross in the yard of an African American family, although it split as to why. The invalidated law selectively punished the terroristic use of hate symbols, but only when the symbols expressed certain hatreds, but not others. The Court held it unconstitutional to punish the terroristic use of a symbol on the basis of which underlying prejudiced viewpoint it punishes.

Wisconsin v. Mitchell, (1993), the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of broadly applicable penalty enhancement laws for hate crime. Penalty enhancement laws increase the punishment for an underlying crime when an additional prohibited element is present, such as the use of a weapon or recidivism. Specifically, the enhancement law at issue in Mitchell punished an offender's discriminatory selection of a victim or property based on the status characteristics of another person, including race, religion, color, national origin, and ancestry. The Supreme Court cited three basic rationales for affirming the law. First, while the government may not punish abstract beliefs, it has wide latitude to sanction motive. Second, the Court also ruled that penalty enhancement laws, unlike the statute at issue in R.A.V., were aimed at discriminatory conduct, and did not prevent or punish merely hateful expression. Third, the Court noted the severity of hate crimes' harms, stating that they are "thought to be more likely to provoke retaliatory crimes, inflict distinct emotional harm on their victims and incite community unrest" (Wisconsin v. Mitchell, p. 487-88, 1993).

Apprendi v. New Jersey, (2000), finding hate crime laws are specific intent statutes requiring proof of discriminatory motive in victim selection, the Supreme Court held prosecutors must establish the presence of a bias motive enhancement or any other enhancement beyond a reasonable doubt to obtain a conviction when its inclusion substantially impacts the defendant's sentence.

Virginia v. Black, (2003), the Supreme Court held that laws that criminalize burning a cross on someone's property to terrorize residents are constitutional, as long as the government does not differentiate which bigoted viewpoint the threat promotes, or automatically punish those consensually burned on private property.

U.S. v. Miller, (2014), in a split decision, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit threw out convictions under the Shepard-Byrd Act because the victim's religion was not established as a "but-for cause" of the attack—meaning that the victim's status as a member of a protected group was not the offender's only motivating factor in committing the crime—as opposed to just being a motivating factor. The Miller decision made prosecuting cases under federal hate crime law more difficult, as the victim's membership in a protected class must be the only motivating factor; if there are any other motivating factors, it is not a hate crime (source).

U.S. v. Hill, (2019), in a split decision, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit ruled the Shepard-Byrd Act properly covered a homophobic violent attack in the workplace because the law "easily falls under Congress's broad [constitutional] authority to regulate interstate commerce."

Recent Federal Laws

The Hate Crime Statistics Act (HCSA), 28 U.S.C. § 534, was signed into law by President Bush in April 1990. The HCSA initially required the Attorney General to collect data voluntarily submitted by the states on crimes motivated by race, religion, sexual orientation, and ethnicity, but was subsequently amended in the 1990s to include disability. Gender and gender identity were added in 2013, and other changes were made in 2017 that added various religious and ethnic subcategories.

The Hate Crime Sentencing Enhancement Act was enacted in 1994. The statute, a penalty enhancement law, increases the sentence for underlying federal offenses by about one third when the fact finder establishes beyond a reasonable doubt that the target is intentionally selected because of the race, color, religion, national origin, ethnicity, gender, disability, or sexual orientation of another. The law's practical limitation is that it is only applicable to a relatively small number of substantive underlying federal offenses (28 U.S.C. 994).

The Matthew Shepard and James Byrd, Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 2009, became effective in 2010 after being signed by President Obama in October 2009. This new federal law, codified at 18 U.S.C. §249, improved the existing criminal civil rights statute by extending federal group protection to gender, gender identity, disability, and sexual orientation. Federal law previously covered only race, color, religion, and national origin. However, these new categories, like some earlier ones, are only protected in the new law when the bigoted crimes also affect interstate commerce because of federal jurisdictional requirements found in the Constitution's Commerce Clause. The Shepard Byrd Act punishes violence and attempts involving bodily injury through firearms, fire, explosives, and other dangerous devices. Second, the legislation also expands the mandate of the Hate Crimes Statistics Act to cover gender and gender identity.

The Protecting Religiously Affiliated Institutions Act of 2018, enacted in September 2018, expands existing law protecting houses of worship to include "real property owned or leased by a nonprofit, [or] religiously affiliated organization."

Recent Federal Proposals to Combat Hate

In July 2019, a group of bipartisan U.S. Senators announced their plan to introduce the "Never Again Education Act." If enacted, the Act would create a grant program at the U.S. Department of Education to enable teachers across the nation to access resources and training to teach their students about the Holocaust.

In July 2019, U.S. Senators Richard Blumenthal (D-CT) and Dick Durbin (D-IL) introduced the Khalid Jabara and Heather Heyer National Opposition to Hate, Assaults, and Threats to Equality (NO HATE) Act of 2019, and Representatives Don Beyer (D-VA) and Pete Olson (R-TX) introduced its companion bill in the House of Representatives under the name NO HATE Act. The bill is named after two hate crime victims whose murders were prosecuted as hate crimes but not reported in hate crime statistics. If passed, the bill would incentivize state and local jurisdiction to improve their hate crime reporting and data collection systems.

There have also been proposals among advocacy groups to close the so-called but-for loophole referenced above in U.S. v. Miller, which would change the motivation standard that prosecutors would have to prove under current federal hate crime law, from having to prove a victim's membership in a protected category as the sole cause of the offender's crime, to a significant motivating factor.

Recent State Reforms on Hate Crime – Legislative and Non-Legislative

UTAH

In April 2019 Utah governor Gary Herbert signed a new hate crime bill, SB 103, into law that expanded both the groups and criminal circumstances covered after a brutal anti-Latino assault was found not to be covered by a weaker previous law, SB 102, which prosecutors deemed ineffectual and did not address felony attacks.

NEW YORK

Starting with the introduction of a similar bill in 2014, New York's legislature has approved the passage of a bill that bans the use of the "panic" defense by suspects charged with crimes against gay and transsexual individuals. In support of the bill, Governor Andrew Cuomo tweeted that he would sign it into law once it reached his desk. However, some criminal defense organizations in the state have been outspoken against it, asserting that its passage will limit due process for suspects.

INDIANA

In Indiana, Senate Bill 198 was signed into law on April 3, 2019. The new law enhances penalties for crimes based on a person's actual or perceived characteristic, trait, belief, practice, association or other characteristics. The statute covers color, creed, disability, national origin, race, religion and sexual orientation, but excludes gender, gender identity, age or sex.

OREGON

Oregon passed Senate Bill 577, which expands the circumstances where the state's earlier 1981 intimidation statute, which focused on perpetrator group conduct, was deficient, by strengthening penalties and clarifying coverage. The legislation also expanded data collection to include non-criminal incidents.

GEORGIA

Georgia currently has no hate crimes law. In 2004, the state Supreme Court overturned a law that addressed the topic. This shortcoming is also present in the state legislature, which has failed to pass any law concerning the issue over the last two sessions. In light of these facts, Georgia prosecutors are advocating for the ability to charge suspects under laws that would directly address crimes of hate.

SOUTH CAROLINA

H. 3063, which just passed in the Criminal Law Subcommittee of the South Carolina House of Representatives, would amend pre-existing law with an enhancement for crimes motivated by discrimination based on race, religion, color, sex, age national origin, sexual orientation or homelessness. So far, 28 state representatives have sponsored the bill.

NORTH CAROLINA

This year, a group of Democratic lawmakers tried to strengthen North Carolina's hate crime law. In March, State Senators Jay Chaudhuri of Wake County, Valerie Foushee of Orange County, and Mujtaba Mohammed of Mecklenburg County introduced the Hate Crimes Prevention Act to broaden the existing law to include sexual orientation, gender identity, and disability, and to create a hate crime category of "felonious assault" applicable to crimes of bias involving death, kidnapping, rape, or forcible sexual offenses. It would also require the creation of a hate crime database at the State Bureau of Investigation and mandate hate crime-related training for law enforcement and prosecutors.

NEVADA

Joining the ranks of other states, Nevada has succeeded in banning the use of "panic" defenses for suspects charged with crimes against gay and transsexual members of the community. The passage of the bill received a landslide victory in both the State Senate and House before the governor signed it into law.

MINNESOTA

Keith Ellison, the Attorney General for the state of Minnesota, has begun the process of creating a work group that will empower local law enforcement to more accurately document crimes of hate and bias. Additionally, a grant program that funds security initiatives for places of worship was extended by Minnesota state leadership.

NORTH DAKOTA

Recently, the North Dakota Advisory Committee held a public meeting focused on listening to concerns expressed by professionals and activists from within the state. However, some participants left the meeting early under the impression that the committee had not done enough to address issues of hate experienced by citizens of North Dakota.

MICHIGAN

The Michigan State Police has added a hate crimes category for attacks against people based on their gender identity, which brings the state in line with FBI tracking categories. The federal agency started tracking gender identity and sexual orientation hate crimes following the adoption of the Matthew Shepard and James Byrd, Jr., Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 2009.

CALIFORNIA

AB 1052 would require peace officers to undergo comprehensive training on hate crimes. It also requires all in-service peace officers to take a refresher course on hate crimes every three years that will be developed by the Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training.

AB 300 would improve accuracy in reporting of hate crimes and incidents by requiring specific reports from law enforcement agencies in California to include a checkbox indicating whether the case is a hate crime or incident. It would also require law enforcement agencies to complete a supplemental report that specifies the type of bias motivation and other relevant information for each hate crime or incident.

In June 2019, AB 1985 was signed into law. The bill clarifies that a disability is protected under the law regardless of whether it is temporary, permanent, congenital, or acquired by heredity, accident, injury, advanced age, or illness. The bill also requires any local law enforcement agency that updates an existing hate crime policy or adopts a new hate crime policy to include, among other things, the Police Officer Standards and Training (POST) framework and information regarding bias motivation (source).

Currently held under submission, AB 301 will establish new oversight by the California Department of Justice regarding the reporting of hate crimes by local law enforcement agencies. The department will maintain a list of all law enforcement agencies for distribution of hate crime reporting procedures, auditing for accuracy the reporting of hate crimes, and to review agency policies on how hate crimes are reported. Further, the bill will establish a school-based program with the goal of preventing crimes and incidents of bias, along with educating students on how to identify and report such cases. Because AB 301 is held under submission, changes may be made to it before it is passed into law.

Still being developed is AB 1422, which was first introduced in February 2019. In its current form, AB 1422 will make bias-motivated crimes against the homeless a hate crime, but it is expected to be resubmitted to amend the state's "vulnerable victim law" instead.

APPENDIX II: DOMESTIC TERRORISM PROSECUTIONS

► Different data sets on federal terrorism prosecutions vary with respect to definitions and other parameters, but they generally show a decline, with some older cases being dropped because of evidentiary or statute of limitations issues, among others.

*Four categories of domestic terrorism – as tracked and reported by the USDOJ LIONS (Legal Information Office Network System) database – are included in the chart above: 1) Domestic Terrorism, 2) Domestic Terrorism – Hoaxes, 3) Domestic Terrorism – Financing, and 3) Domestic Terrorism – Critical Infrastructure.

Numbers of "referrals declined" and "convictions" are sometimes higher than "referrals received" or "prosecutions filed" because the disposition of a case, e.g. dismissal or conviction, may occur in a different year from which the case was filed.

New U.S. Terrorism-Related Cases by Year

Source: New America

► The FBI currently classifies domestic terrorism into four categories: racially motivated violent extremism, anti-government/anti-authority extremism, animal rights/environmental extremism, and abortion extremism (source). Previously, the agency had tracked a broad array of categories of racially motivated crime, including the controversial “Black Identity Extremism.” While the agency has since stopped using that term, it has also stopped tracking “White Supremacist Extremism.” In a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing, FBI Director Christopher Wray attributed this shift to the agency’s attempt to focus on criminal behavior, saying, “We only investigate violence. We don’t investigate extremism. We don’t investigate ideology. We don’t investigate rhetoric” (source).

Though international terror threats have remained stable, the FBI has seen a significant rise in the number of white supremacy domestic terrorism cases in recent months (source). Since November 2018, the FBI has recorded approximately 100 international terrorism arrests and 90 domestic terrorism arrests (source). In 2017, there were approximately 150 arrests that the FBI classified as domestic terror, and about 120 in 2018. According to one FBI official who spoke to CNN, the agency is on course to match or exceed those numbers in Fiscal Year 2019 (source).

The FBI currently has about 5,000 terrorism-related investigations open, including 850 related to domestic terrorism, 1,000 related to ISIS and affiliated groups, and 1,000 for homegrown violent extremists (source). Of the 850 domestic terrorism investigations open, approximately half are related to Anti-Government/Anti-Authority Extremism, and approximately 40 percent are related to Racially Motivated Violent Extremism. A “significant majority” of the Racially Motivated Violent Extremist cases currently open are related to White Extremism, according to testimony given by Michael McGarrity, FBI Assistant Director for the Counterterrorism Division at a May 2019 hearing in front of the House Committee on Homeland Security (source).

Term	Statute Number	Statute Text	FBI Working Definition
International Terrorism	18 U.S. Code §2331(a)	"The term "international terrorism" means activities that . . . involve violent acts or acts dangerous to human life that are a violation of the criminal laws of the United States or of any State, or that would be a criminal violation if committed within the jurisdiction of the United States or of any State. . . appear to be intended. . . to intimidate or coerce a civilian population; to influence the policy of a government by intimidation or coercion; or to affect the conduct of a government by mass destruction, assassination, or kidnapping; and. . . occur primarily outside the territorial jurisdiction of the United States, or transcend national boundaries in terms of the means by which they are accomplished, the persons they appear intended to intimidate or coerce, or the locale in which their perpetrators operate or seek asylum."	According to the FBI, International Terrorism constitutes terrorism perpetrated by individuals and/or groups inspired by or associated with designated Foreign Terrorist Organizations (FTOs), a list of groups maintained by the U.S. Department of State, or nations, i.e. state-sponsored terrorism.
International Terrorism Charging Statute	18 U.S.C. § 2332b – Acts of Terrorism Transcending National Boundaries	"Whoever, involving conduct transcending national boundaries and in a circumstance described in subsection (b). . . kills, kidnaps, maims, commits an assault resulting in serious bodily injury, or assaults with a dangerous weapon any person within the United States; or. . . creates a substantial risk of serious bodily injury to any other person by destroying or damaging any structure, conveyance, or other real or personal property within the United States or by attempting or conspiring to destroy or damage any structure, conveyance, or other real or personal property within the United States; in violation of the laws of any State, or the United States, shall be punished as prescribed in subsection (c)."
Domestic Terrorism	18 U.S. Code §2331(5)	"[T]he term "domestic terrorism" means activities that. . . involve acts dangerous to human life that are a violation of the criminal laws of the United States or of any State; appear to be intended to intimidate or coerce a civilian population; to influence the policy of a government by intimidation or coercion; or to affect the conduct of a government by mass destruction, assassination, or kidnapping; and. . . occur primarily within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States. . . ."	Domestic Terrorism constitutes terrorism perpetrated by individuals and/or groups inspired by or associated with primarily U.S.-based groups or movements, espousing extremist ideologies of a political, religious, social, racial, or environmental nature.

APPENDIX III: LAW ENFORCEMENT BIAS ALLEGATIONS

Online Bias from Law Enforcement Officers

► The Plain View Project (PVP), a research project that tracks public social media postings made by Police Officers across the U.S., has identified 1,974 postings and comments made by current police officers that appear to endorse violence, racism, and homophobia, since PVP began tracking such postings in the fall of 2017 (source). Various agencies, listed below, have responded to these findings (source).

Name of Agency	Number of Officers Involved	Action Taken
Dallas Police Department	34	Conducting internal investigation to determine whether any officers violated departmental policies, especially Social Media Policy (source).
Lake County Sheriff's Office, Florida	16	Opened an inquiry into 16 active duty officers.
Philadelphia Police Department	72	72 officers placed on administrative leave. As many as 13 officers are expected to be suspended with intent to dismiss (source).
St. Louis Circuit Attorney's Office	22	St. Louis Circuit Attorney Kim Gardner announced that 22 officers would be barred from bringing their cases to her office; 7 of these have been permanently banned, meaning the Prosecutor's office won't pursue charges based on their investigations, issue search warrants at their requests, or look at cases that hinge on their testimony (source).
Phoenix Police Department	12	12 officers were recently assigned to nonenforcement roles pending an investigation (source).

In addition to those listed above, the Gretna Police Department in Louisiana recently terminated two officers for violating the department's social media policy when one referred to Congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez as a "vile idiot" and suggested she should be shot, and the other officer liked the post online (source). Government employees' speech is generally protected by the First Amendment when: 1) the speech is about a matter of "public concern," 2) it is made as a private citizen and not as a government employee, and – if parts 1 and 2 are met, then a balancing test is applied to determine 3) whether the employee's interest in the speech outweighs the government's interest in the safe, efficient, and effective accomplishment of its mission (source).

Online Bias from U.S. Customs and Border Protection Agents

► In July 2019, ProPublica reported a secret unofficial Facebook page for Border Patrol agents called “I’m 10-15.” Patrol code for “aliens in custody.” Before ProPublica’s report the group had approximately 9,500 members and defined itself as a place for “serious” and “funny” discussion about members’ work.

Screenshots obtained by ProPublica revealed racist, sexist, and sexually violent posts about members of Congress and immigrants (source). Following ProPublica’s report, the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) announced an inspector General’s investigation (source). The group has since changed its name to “America First” and prevented members from posting additional posts or comments by archiving the page (source). According to The Washington Post, CBP was notified in 2016 and carried out an inquiry before taking unspecified disciplinary action, as such posts likely violate CBP code of conduct (source). The head of CBP, Carla Provost, was also discovered to be a member of the group (source).

Source: ProPublica

► Just days later, a second secret Facebook group with an apparent nexus to U.S. Customs and Border Patrol agents was discovered. The group, called “The Real CBP Nation,” has approximately 1,000 members, and posts vulgar and sexually explicit posts, mocks migrant families, and posts derisive images of Asians and African Americans. Since the discovery of this second secret group, Facebook announced that it had removed content from the group’s page that violated its policies on bullying and harassment, cruel and insensitive content, and sexual exploitation of adults. A CBP spokesperson told CNN that the group has been referred to the Office of Professional Responsibility (source).

Law Enforcement Members of Extremist or "Patriot" Groups on Facebook

► In June 2019, Reveal News published an investigation showing hundreds of active duty and retired law enforcement officers are members of Confederate, anti-Islam, Misogynistic, or anti-Government militia groups on Facebook.

Nearly 150 officers were found to be members of non-criminal, yet controversial groups such as The Oath Keepers and Three Percenters. Since publication, more than 50 departments nationwide have launched internal investigations, and at least one officer has been fired for violating department policies. Among more recent controversies involving U.S. law enforcement have been recurring accusations of small groups of officers with links to extremist groups. In 2015, a classified FBI Counterterrorism Policy Guide warned that white supremacist and other far right groups had infiltrated U.S. law enforcement agencies (source). There are over 700,000 sworn officers in more than 15,000 state and local agencies in the United States (source).

In another story, Reveal compiled a list of active police officers who met at least one of the following criteria: interacted with an extremist group, proactively joined an extremist group, or posted denigrating content on their own public pages and were members of extremist groups. (Full list can be found here)

Threats Against Law Enforcement on Reddit

► On June 26, 2019 Reddit announced it was quarantining the Pro-Trump sub-reddit, "The_Donald," for violating Reddit's violence policy by threatening police and public figures. A number of anti-police messages were posted on The_Donald, including "no problems shooting a cop trying to strip rights away from Citizens" (source).

Gang-Like Secret Societies in the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department

► In June 2018, then-Los Angeles County Sheriff Jim McDonnell investigated alleged secret small cliques and gangs in his department. His announcement came weeks after accusations that 20 deputies in Compton had matching tattoos of a skeleton with a rifle (source). The agency is the largest sheriff's Department in the nation with almost ten thousand sworn deputies (source).

Secret societies in the department—such as the Regulators, Grim Reapers, and Jump Out Boys—go back to the 1970s. Some groups have been accused of promoting excessive force and enforcing a code of silence. In 2012, detectives launched a probe into another secret deputy clique whose members appeared to embrace officer-involved shootings as a badge of honor. Nearly 30 years ago, a federal judge determined that one group, the Vikings Club, was a “neo-Nazi, white supremacist gang.” As part of that settlement, the county agreed to re-train deputies and pay $7.5 million in victim compensation (source).

In June 2019, LA county settled with the heirs of Donta Taylor, a 31-year-old man shot and killed in a foot chase. While deputies claimed he had a gun, no weapon was found. At least one of the officers involved, Samuel Aldama, admitted to having a tattoo with a skeleton holding a rifle, and said up to 20 of his colleagues got matching tattoos for “working hard” (source).

The following month, the FBI announced an investigation of a “secret society of tattooed deputies” in East Los Angeles and similar gang-like groups within the Department. That investigation follows allegations of beatings and harassment by the Banditos, whose deputy members sport tattoos of a skeleton in a sombrero, bandolier, and pistol. Members are accused of using gang-like tactics to recruit young Latinos. In particular, the FBI is trying to determine whether they encourage potential members to commit criminal acts such as planting evidence or writing false incident reports, to secure membership (source).

Fatal Police Shootings and Officers Killed

► In 2015, The Washington Post started documenting police shootings where an on-duty police officer shot and killed a civilian. It excludes shootings that occurred in police custody, off-duty officer shootings, or non-shooting deaths. In 2019, The Post has documented 457 civilian shooting deaths by police while on duty.

While the FBI and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) log fatal shootings by police, officials acknowledge that their data is incomplete. In 2015, The Post documented twice as many fatal police shootings as had been recorded in FBI data (source). On January 1, 2019, the FBI officially launched the National Use-of-Force Data Collection and encourages all law enforcement agencies across the nation to participate by submitting their data on police shootings (source). About one hundred police officers are killed annually in the United States in the line of duty, with about half occurring in violent interactions.

Data for graph come from The Washington Post and FBI

"We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. The mystic chords of memory will swell when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

— Abraham Lincoln, First Inaugural Speech

"We cannot play ostrich. Democracy just cannot flourish amid fear. Liberty cannot bloom amid hate. Justice cannot take root amid rage. America must get to work. In the chill climate in which we live, we must go against the prevailing wind. We must dissent from the indifference. We must dissent from the apathy. We must dissent from the fear, the hatred and the mistrust."

— Thurgood Marshall, The Liberty Medal Acceptance Speech

"America is the greatest country in the world."

— Muhammad Ali

"The glory of this land has been its capacity for transcending the moral evils of our past. For example, the long struggle of minority citizens for equal rights, once a source of disunity and civil war, is now a point of pride for all Americans. We must never go back. There is no room for racism, anti-Semitism, or other forms of ethnic and racial hatred in this country."

— Ronald Reagan, Remarks at the Annual Convention of the National Association of Evangelicals

"I hope that every American, regardless of where he lives, will stop and examine his conscience about this and other related incidents. This nation was founded by men of many nations and backgrounds. It was founded on the principle that all men are created equal, and that the rights of every man are diminished when the rights of one man are threatened."

— John F. Kennedy Jr., Report to the American People on Civil Rights

"We must always take sides. Neutrality helps the oppressor, never the victim. Silence encourages the tormentor, never the tormented. Sometimes we must interfere. When human lives are endangered, when human dignity is in jeopardy, national borders and sensitivities become irrelevant. Wherever men or women are persecuted because of their race, religion, or political views, that place must—at that moment—become the center of the universe."

— Elie Wiesel, The Night Trilogy

"Prophets believe that what they proclaim on any day can be transformed into real action."

— William J. Barber II, Forward Together: A Moral Message for the Nation

"I will not let anyone walk through my mind with their dirty feet."

— Mahatma Gandhi

"If someone is gay and he searches for the Lord and has good will, who am I to judge? We shouldn't marginalize people for this. They must be integrated into society."

— Pope Francis

"We have tolerance, respect, and equality in our written laws but not in the hearts of some of our people."

— Ruby Bridges

"When the forces of extremism become so overwhelming that they depress the hope of the people, the prophetic voice and mission is to connect words and actions in ways that build restorative hope, so a Movement for restorative justice can arise."

— William J. Barber II, Forward Together: A Moral Message for the Nation

"I learned that very often the most intolerant and narrow-minded people are the ones who congratulate themselves on their tolerance and open-mindedness."

— Christopher Hitchens

"Those who feel like they can intimidate our fellow citizens to take out their anger don't represent the best of America, they represent the worst of humankind, and they should be ashamed of that kind of behavior."

— George W. Bush, Remarks by President Bush at the Islamic Center of Washington D.C.

"This is my charge to everyone: We have to be better. We have to love more, hate less. We've got to listen more and talk less. We've got to know that this is everybody's responsibility, every single person here. Every single person who's not here; Every single person who doesn't want to be here. Every single person who agrees and doesn't agree. It's our responsibility to make this world a better place."
