

Post-Graduate Certificate Program in Public Health

California State University, San Bernardino (CSUSB), ranked among the top universities for innovation and student diversity, is excited to offer its Post-Graduate Certificate (PGC) Program in Public Health (PH).

This program prepares students to address complex health issues impacting communities at local, national, and global levels. Whether you're an aspiring public health professional, or looking to advance into management or specialized roles, the PGC is your pathway to success.

Fast and Flexible

Complete four 4-unit courses in just two semesters, designed for convenience and to fit your busy schedule.

Growing Demand for Public Health Professionals

Learn through various interdisciplinary approaches to integrate public health perspectives.

Pathway to MPH*

PGC Program in PH can be used as a pathway toward the Master of Public Health (MPH) program.

Optional Practical Training (OPT)

PGC students can use the federal Optional Practical Training (OPT) program to work for one year in the USA without any visa sponsorship.

*The PGC Program in Public Health can be used as a pathway toward CSUSB's Master of Public Health (MPH) program. Students who successfully complete their PGC program can apply their sixteen (16) PGC credits to the MPH program. However, PGC graduates are not automatically admitted to the MPH program; they must apply separately to the program and meet its academic and other requirements.
